THE SCHOONER PROSPER WERCKED AT PORT ALLEN

Trim Lumber Vessel Loses Anchorage In Kona Storm Sunday Afternoon And Is Beached At Mouth of Hanapepe River-- Back Believed Broken--British Yeoman Has Second Narrow Escape In Three Weeks

The American schooner Prosper, Captain Murchison, which arrived at Port Allen a few days ago with a cargo of lumber for the Kauai Railway Company, is a wreck at the mouth of Hanapepe river, inside of Hanapepe Bay, about a quarter of a mile from Port Allen boat landing, having dragged her anchors opposite the Port Allen landing Sunday afternoon, after which she was purposely steered for the mud flat at the mouth of the river to escape complete disaster on the breakwater. Her keel is gone and, worst of all, it is believed that her back is broken, on which latter account it would likely be next to impossible to take her to a drydock. She will probably ultimately be sold and broken up where she lies. This, however, will be a matter to be determined after a more careful survey by experts. The United States Lighthouse Tender Columbine went around from Hanamanu to Port Allen yesterday afternoon and towed the bark British Yeoman out beyond the heavy surf, where she was anchored, the Columbine taking up a position nearby to render any assistance that might be necessary. About nine o'clock last night the steamer Wailele, which had left Honolulu at about 10 o'clock in the morning, arrived off Port Allen, got a line on the British Yeoman and began towing her to sea. The Columbine picked up the bark outside and left with her for Honolulu (the Wailele coming around to Nawiliwili to take the mail) where, the intention is, she will be put into drydock. What the fate of the steamer and her tow were during the night, however, is not yet known here, but certain it is that they struck into one of the worst gales that has prevailed in this channel in a long while. The schooner Prosper seems to be in about the same position in Hanapepe Bay this morning. She may never be saved, except in pieces. At noon Sunday the bark British Yeoman and the schooner Prosper were lying straight off and a little seaward of the Port Allen breakwater. The kona wind had been blowing strong for hours, and rollers of great height and force had been entering the broad mouth of the bay, the two vessels rolling considerably and drawing hard upon their anchors. About two o'clock in the afternoon the Prosper lost one of her anchors and began to swing around to port. She got out a line and (Continued on page 5.)

AN AUTO CRASHES INTO CANE CARS

The railway crossing on the Nawiliwili side of Hotel Lihue is responsible for another bad automobile accident, which occurred last Tuesday evening just after dark, and came near resulting seriously to two men. The car belonged to Albert Horner, Jr., of Kapaa, and was being driven by him. With him in the front seat was E. W. Carden, of the Lihue bank. The young men had been down to Nawiliwili to superintend the embarking of shipments by the steamer of that afternoon. The car had rounded the last turn into Lihue and was approaching the hotel at an average speed. When within a very short distance of the railway crossing, a train of cars suddenly emerged from the cane field and were being backed across the road. The auto was too close to escape collision and in a second there was a crash, the machine driving in between two cars, knocking both from the track. The speed of the auto had been slightly checked, and both Horner and Carden, being light and athletic, sprang from it. Both were bruised, however, in addition to which Carden received a gash on the chin and both of his arms were slightly sprained. The car had a remarkable escape, being much less injured than might reasonably be supposed. It is stated that a flag man was present at the time, but was not at his post of duty on the road and no warning of the approaching train whatever was given. A mail wagon met with a similar accident at the same crossing some months ago.

STORM TEARS OFF GRANDSTAND ROOF

During the hard blow from the south Sunday night the top of the fine grandstand in Lihue park was ripped off and literally scattered to the four winds. The front fell forward and crashed to pieces on the ground below. Parts of the roof fell back of the grandstand, but most of it was scattered across the park as far as the cane field of Lihue plantation. The interior timbers of the structure were torn loose, but are not damaged to the extent that they may not be used again. The floor of the building and seating arrangement were not disturbed. All over Lihue, Grove Farm, Nawiliwili, Niumalu and other neighborhood sections trees were blown down or broken, and some buildings were damaged, although there was less injury to property than might have been supposed. Along the coast from Lihue to the Mana end of the island the wind was very high. At Waimea a number of trees were blown down, but no property damage is reported. Concern was felt for the Waimea wharf, but the structure weathered the gale in fine style. Exceedingly rough seas prevailed all along the south coast of the island and it was quite fortunate that all of the ports were clear of the small island steamers.

SOME INSPECTION DATES CHANGED

A wireless from General Samuel Johnson announces that he and party of officers will not arrive on Kauai tomorrow morning, as had been planned, but will get here Friday morning instead. No changes will be made in the inspection dates of the Lihue companies, and it is possible that the dates for Makaweli and Waimea will remain the same. Eleele and Kealia will certainly be changed. Notices of the changes and final program will be sent out by mail to commanding officers tonight. The order published on page 4 of this issue had been printed before the change in program was known here, a fact which should be remembered in reading it. GREAT PICTURE COMING. Willie Fernandez is bringing another great picture film to Kauai. Announcement concerning it appears on page 5 of this issue.

MR. KINNEY TOURS KAUAI SCHOOLS

Superintendent Henry Walsworth Kinney, of the Department of Education, arrived on Kauai and in the time to Saturday completed a tour of all the schools of the island, returning to Honolulu Saturday night. While here he was the guest of Commissioner and Mrs. Knudsen, of Kekaha, and Supervising Principal and Mrs. Brodie, of Hanapepe. Owing to the bad weather, travelling was not over pleasant while the superintendent was here, particularly on the Hanalei side. Before leaving Mr. Kinney expressed himself as well satisfied with conditions as he found them on Kauai, although numerous minor improvements here and there will be supported. Mr. Kinney was particularly well pleased with the Kauai High & Grammar School, which he found had developed in the short time of a year and a half from a small beginning into quite a lusty institution.

At the close of the afternoon session the box will be opened, and the questions answered. The public is invited to take part in all discussions. Only 250 teachers on the Island have availed themselves of the pension law. The advantages and inadequacies of the pension act will be discussed. End Of Storm?

The kona storm which had raged since Saturday, or longer, took one final slap at the entire south side and Lihue end of the island between 1:20 and 3 o'clock this morning. There was lightning, thunder and rain, while the wind was at the velocity of a gale. Numerous trees along the coast and in Lihue were thrown down--notably a big one which lies across the road above Nawiliwili, several in the Hotel Lihue yard and five of the fine, old trees in the grove of Lihue Union church. The wind then started to shift slowly around toward the west and this morning the sun came out as bright and clear as though nothing had happened. At this writing (10 o'clock), however, the sky is again overcast with threatening clouds, and the condition of the thermometer indicates that the stern may not yet be entirely over, although the worst has probably passed.
