

PLIGHT OF WHALERS. Royalist Ludlow Refuses Food to His Starving Countrymen.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 25.—Three officers of the wrecked whaling bark Sea Ranger, arrived at this port to-day from Port Townsend, Wash., by rail. One of them, John Rogers of this city, says he has been shipwrecked three times, but never before has he met with such outrageous treatment by white men as he and the crew of the Sea Ranger met with at Sitka, Alaska.

When the thirty-six men reached Sitka they had nothing but what they carried on their backs. The authorities at Sitka could do nothing for them. They wanted food, not money. In the harbor of Sitka were three United States cutters and two American men-of-war, the Mohican and Ranger. Captain Foley of the Sea Ranger saw Captain Ludlow of the Mohican and implored him to do something for the men in procuring food and other necessities. He told Captain Foley that he could not keep them and told him to draw on the owner of the Sea Ranger. Captain Foley, by signing for $30 worth of rations for one week for the crew, was able to keep the men from starving.

The steamer City of Topeka from Port Townsend arrived at Sitka on June 10th. The captain refused to take them to Port Townsend, as they had no money to pay their passage. The men became desperate and began to plan to commit some outrage in order to get in jail, where they would at least get shelter and something to eat. Captain Ludlow was again asked for aid, but would do nothing without pay.

Captain Foley pawned the ship's chronometer and managed to get enough money to take himself and son and five officers to Port Townsend on the City of Topeka, the remainder of the crew being left at Sitka.

The night before leaving Captain Foley asked Captain Ludlow of the Mohican for food for the men he was obliged to leave behind, but was refused. Captain Foley, Rogers says, has reported the matter to the authorities at Washington.

ICE PUT IN THE CAR.

Preparations to Keep Her Majesty of England Cool.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Edmund Yates, cables the Tribune from London: During the Queen's recent journey south the heat had been so great for several days that extraordinary precautions were taken to keep the Queen's two saloons as cool as possible. At Ballater a number of large pans, each containing an immense block of ice, were placed on the floor of the day saloon, and the roots of the Queen's two carriages were entirely covered with a tarpaulin painted white, which was drenched with water at every stoppage.

The train stopped only for a few minutes at Perth, the Queen having decided to dine in her saloon between Perth and Tarbert, so dishes were placed in the carriage and two of the servants arranged the table.

The Emperor of Russia has very unexpectedly announced his intention of sending the Czarowitz to represent the imperial family at the royal wedding, having probably been induced to do so by hearing that Prince Henry of Prussia was to attend on the part of Emperor William. It is not settled yet whether the Czarowitz is to stay at Buckingham Palace as the guest of the Queen, or at Marlborough House, with the Prince and Princess of Wales, but his visit to England will not extend over more than a week.

The impending betrothal of the Grand Duke of Hesse to an Austrian Archduchess has repeatedly been announced in the papers since his recent visit to the court at Vienna. Surely it ought by this time to be generally known that the Hapsburg family statutes forbid the marriage of any member of that clan to a Protestant. The prohibition is most rigorous, so that the betrothal about which there has been so much talk is purely imaginary.

The Hapsburgs marry only Roman Catholics, and we are not likely to hear of the conversion of Grand Duke Ernest, who will probably find a bride much nearer to Darmstadt. The Grand Duke's early marriage is anxiously desired, inasmuch as he has no brother and both his uncles havemorganatic wives and have renounced the right of succession.

IN A BAD FIX

The Startling Sight Which Met a Bon Vivant's Gaze Next Morning.

Here is a story which was a favorite in the repertory of a famous Cincinnati:

"On one occasion," he was wont to say, "a friend of mine had been on a terrific spree which had been occupying his nights right along for two weeks or more. He managed somehow to be on deck during business hours, but when night came he was down in the hold and everywhere else. One morning he awoke heavy-headed, half-dressed and lying crosswise of the bed. When he had gone to sleep or how, he did not remember. There was the odor of stale beer, and wine and tobacco smoke in the room, and bottles and cigar butts were scattered all over. "By a great effort he got to his feet, and for an instant his head felt as if it would fall off and burst into a million pieces. He cast his eyes around the room. As they fell upon the foot of the bed they encountered a grim and grinning monkey sitting on the rail. There was no known reason why a monkey should be there, but there it sat and grinned. He watched it intently as he slipped over toward a table where lay a loaded revolver. He was very, very rocky, but he had grip enough to hold the gun, and with a sudden movement he had it trained on the simian. He was a famous shot, but the monkey never wavered. It simply sat there winking and grinning. My friend held the pistol down on it for a second steadily. "Now," he said nervously, "if you are a real monkey you are in a h— of a fix—then he hesitated for a moment—but if you are not," he went on, "then I am in a h— of a fix." "He banged away, and it was ten days before he was himself again."

Aim at the Drake

And you are bound to hit some of the ducks. This is precisely the same with Wampole's Tasteless Preparation OF Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchial troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION

removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.
