

HAD AN OPPORTUNITY ONCE.

How a Convivial-Looking Man Missed Making a Good Stake.

"Yes," said the convivial-looking man, "there's a terrible sight of truth in what the poet says about every one havin' an opportunity to get rich at some time or other in his life. Now, I had a mighty good opportunity onest."

"What was that?" asked the red-faced sportsman.

"I met an old feller in a city where I was who was on a big drunk. He was richer'n mud an' was blowin' in his stuff to beat the band. I kinder trained with him for a day or two an' then one afternoon he went off into the blindest fit of the jerry's you ever see. He seen all kind of things. I took him to a hotel an' nursed an' tended him like he was my father. When he got well I found out that he was a big miller from out West. He called me inter his room one day, jus' afore he was goin' home, an' handed me a paper. It began: 'In consideration of $1 in hand paid an' other good an' valuable considerations,' an' went on to say that the ol' feller giv' me two thousand barcls of flour. Flour was worth $10 a barrel them 'days, an' that would have made a mighty good stake for me. But I didn't get it."

"Why?" asked the red-faced sportsman.

"Didn't have the dollar," replied the convivial-looking man, sadly.—Buffalo Express.

INDIVIDUALITIES.

The Duke of Edinburgh, it is understood, is among the heaviest sufferers in England by the bank suspensions in Australia. As the Duke is a very wealthy man, he will not be embarrassed by the misfortune.

Captain Harry Bartlett, who commands Lieutenant Peary's Arctic exploring ship, is only twenty-nine years of age, but he has been fifteen years at sea and rates high as a navigator. He is the youngest of four brothers, all of whom are captains.

Mr. von Mumm, formerly of the German Legation at Washington, but since transferred to Bucharest and then to Rome, is a zealous amateur photographer. Among the pictures carried away by him as mementos of his Washington sojourn was a collection of portraits of nearly every girl prominent in Washington society for the last half-dozen years.

Henry McCalmont, the owner of Isinglass, winner of the Derby, has just entered his thirty-third year. At Eton he was a successful athlete, playing on the football team and rowing on the eight. He inherited a fortune of twenty millions of dollars from his great-uncle somewhat unexpectedly, into the full possession of which, however, he did not come until his last birthday.

Mr. Knut Hamsun, the Norwegian author, the fame of whose writings is due largely to his novel "Hunger," is about to take a situation in a Paris cafe as waiter. Being poor, it is the only way open for him to get a knowledge of the French capital and of the French language. In the same way he learned English, having come to America and become a waiter in a Boston hotel.

It will be remembered that when Booth was playing "Richard" in Chicago in 1879, a mentally unbalanced spectator named Gray shot at the actor twice from the gallery. One of the bullets Mr. Booth secured and had it set in a gold cartridge, upon which he had engraved the words: "From Mark Gray to Edwin Booth, April 23, 1879." This grim reminder he always preserved.

It is announced from Spain that Emilio Castelar, the eminent republican leader, has retired permanently from public life with the declaration that while he shall always be a republican, he does not intend to act against the monarchy; for he has come to believe that under present conditions no other form of government is better adapted to the needs of Spain. So he advises his friends to act with the Liberal party in the future and support the crown.

"I know nothing of Mr. Parnell. I never saw him." So said Lord Salisbury in his speech at Derry recently. It is rather a curious confession that the leader of a great English party should have contrived to get through the years between 1880 and 1890 without ever seeing so conspicuous a politician as Mr. Parnell, or even getting to know something about him. Mr. Gladstone—so far as his strength and time permit—goes everywhere, sees everything, and knows everybody connected with his party. Lord Salisbury shuns political clubs, and has a remarkably small circle of acquaintance among the men of his own party.

Ruggiero Leoncavallo, the man of the hour in musical circles, is thirty-five years old. He is quite unspoiled by his meteoric fame, and is frank and genial in manner. Dressed as he was while in London, in pepper and salt clothes, brown soft hat, and tan shoes, he might have passed, except for his Italian complexion, for a well-to-do young business man. He composed his "I Pagliocci" to earn his daily bread, after spending much time and labor on an ambitious "epic poem in music"—a trilogy having for its subject the fortunes of the house of Medici. Now that he is famous this early work, on which he toiled for six years, will be given to the public in the fall. "I Pagliocci," on which his fame substantially rests, was the work of six months.

At a recent dinner in New York city a prominent Southern woman present remarked, in the course of a conversation touching upon the famous statesman, that it "was almost wicked in Charles Sumner to have married. He was so deeply in love with himself," she continued, "that his marriage was little short of bigamy."

Aim at the Drake

And you are bound to hit some of the ducks. This is precisely the same with

Wampole's

Tasteless

Preparation

OF

Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchial troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION

removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.

Sample copies mailed to any address. A limited number of advertisements inserted at reasonable rates.

The Hawaiian Annual now in its Nineteenth year, and acknowledged not only as the best authority on all information pertaining to the islands that residents should know and strangers invariably ask, but the only reference book of Hawaiian statistics, and annual record of current and remnant events. There are homes probably in this land in which it is unknown, except by name, and there are numerous friends abroad to whom this publication would afford untold satisfaction for the fund of reliable information it imparts in its one hundred and fifty or more pages, with nothing of the "Guide Book" gush about it. Price per copy to any address in these islands, 75 cents; or mailed to any address in the Postal Union for 85 cents each
