A LIFE ROMANCE.

Longfellow's Great Poem of Revenge—How Surpassed.

The sad glory of Longfellow's Gabriel and Evangeline has been outdone in Chicago.

Mary Lena Olson and Christopher Bergstrom were betrothed lovers in their youth in Sweden. Circumstances parted them, and they both made their way to Chicago. They never met although they spent the last fifteen years of their lives beneath the same roof—the insane asylum of Cook county. Both died the same week.

County Agent Olson, who knew both of them in Sweden, recognized Lena as he was passing through the institution at Duwong. "She was engaged to a man of my town," he said, "but they drifted apart. The man came to America, and she followed him after a time, but never got trace of him."

Mary Lena Olson was found unconscious on the street one cold night in March, 1882, and was taken to the county hospital. When consciousness was restored she was found to be insane. Efforts to learn her history all proved fruitless.

Bergstrom was a patient in the insane asylum for ten years before Miss Olson was sent there. He used to speak continually in his ravings of "Lena," and "Lena" was the last word he spoke. He was the oldest inmate of the institution when he died.

It was on account of "Old Chris's" death and his mutterings of the one name "Lena" that County Agent Olson's mind recalled the recollection of having seen Lena Olson in the asylum. He remembered then that Christopher Olson was the name of her lost lover.

Mary Lena Olson died August 15th and was buried in Mount Olivet cemetery.

Christopher J. Bergstrom was laid to rest in the potter's field the day of his death.

Harper's Weekly

of October 2, 1897, has an interesting article on "Lessons of the '97 Bicycle," from which we take the following:

"How much of a figure the department emporium will cut in next season's trade cannot be estimated, but it is not likely that the big stores will bother so much with the selling of cycles, which has not been particularly profitable in all instances. The makers of high grade machines have no grievance against the department stores, whose cheap wheels induced thousands of people to become riders, and these same people will buy again next year. They will not buy, however, the average department-store wheel, AND WASTE UPON IT MORE IN REPAIRS THAN ITS ORIGINAL COST."

Columbias and Ramblers

have never been known as department-store wheels. They cost too much for such people. Look out for the new wheels with high sounding names. For department-store trade should be stamped on most of them.
