WONDERFUL LIFE HISTORY FINISHED

DEATH OF JUDGE W. LUTHER WILCOX YESTERDAY EVENING—HIS LIFE.

Judge William Luther Wilcox, kamaaina, and probably the most widely personally known judge or magistrate of the Territory, died at 8 o'clock last evening at the Queen's Hospital, after several operations having for their purpose the arrest of gangrene which had entered his system. He was surrounded at his death by his wife and his four brothers, the only relatives of his generation whom he leaves. His end was painless and peaceful.

His mortal illness began with his use of a razor to subdue a refractory corn. Gangrene set in, though at the time he was not aware that it was gangrene that was affecting him. In hopes of benefiting his health he took a trip to the coast. In May last, accompanying his brother George N. Wilcox. He returned to Honolulu about June 1 apparently much improved in health, and returned to the bench, holding court several days. Ill-health had however seized on him, and after remaining at home for several days, he went to the Queen's Hospital. June 20, one of his toes was amputated in the hope that it would stay the ravages of the gangrene which had now become apparent. A few days later, a second toe was amputated, and on July 7, his leg was amputated at the knee. This operation it was thought for a time would relieve him, but later it became evident that it would not, and since Saturday his physicians had been without hope. The middle of last week the three brothers on Kauai were sent for and arrived Wednesday on the Mikahala.

William Luther Wilcox was the sixth son and child of Mr. and Mrs. Abner Wilcox who came here as teachers under the American Board. He was born at Waioli, Kauai, July 8, 1853, and so was exactly 50 years and four days of age when he died. About ten years ago he married Kahulua, a niece of Solomon Kupihua, of Molokai, an Hawaiian highly esteemed by all who know her. No children were born of the marriage. His father and mother being teachers, Judge Wilcox was instructed by them until he was about fourteen years of age, when he was sent to what is now Oahu College. He attended this institution two years, 1867-68. While thus at school his father and mother returned to Winstead, Conn. on a visit, and while there both died, within an hour of each other. Their death threw young W. L. Wilcox on his own resources, and he applied for and was appointed to the position of Hawaiian interpreter for

Lord Rosebery Still Skeptical

LONDON, July 2.—Lord Rosebery in the House of Lords this afternoon renewed the debate on the preferential tariff proposition making a further request for information regarding the Cabinet's plans. In the course of a long speech he ridiculed Colonial Secretary Chamberlain's programme and said he did not believe the Government intended to prosecute an inquiry into the matter. The allegations that such an inquiry was being made were, said Lord Rosebery, merely a cloak to screen the irreconcilable differences between the Colonial Secretary and the other members of the Cabinet, and he demanded to know whether the inquiry would be individual or collective and whether the results would be published.

The Duke of Devonshire, the Lord President of the Council, said it was impossible now to give the exact scope of the inquiry. Several heads had been suggested by Chamberlain and Balfour. The Government had determined that the inquiry should be full and satisfactory. His Lordship declined to enter further upon the subject without a more explicit and longer notice than Lord Rosebery had seen fit to give in precipitating today's discussion. He could say that the position of the Government at present was somewhat different from that of Chamberlain, but they did not conflict. The whole Cabinet had agreed that the time was ripe for an investigation of the possibilities of a closer fiscal union with the colonies.

SUSPENDS RURAL FREE DELIVERY

OMAHA, Neb., July 2.—Rural free delivery of mail throughout the West has been practically ended by the recent ruling of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow, who has ruled that no free delivery route shall be continued unless 100 families are served and 3000 pieces of mail matter handled monthly. This ruling is the result of Bristow's recently announced position on the rural delivery question, in which he declared that rural delivery has been making too rapid strides and must go slower.

Superintendent Rathbone of the Western division said today: Enforcement of that order will wipe out 90 per cent of the routes in this district, comprising Minnesota, both Dakotas, Nebraska and Iowa, and also will affect other Western States in the same way, especially Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and Utah. On examining the routes in this district I find that few routes serve more than seventy-five families. We will make no attempt to enforce the order until the matter can be taken up with Bristow.

All field men have been called in for consultation and a modification will be asked for. Farmers throughout the States affected are preparing petitions, which will be forwarded to Washington, asking that the rule not apply to thinly settled Western States.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Captain Cartle, the Auditor of the Treasury for the Postoffice Department, today made the official estimate that the postal deficiency for the fiscal year just closed will be $4,617,203. The deficit for the previous fiscal year was $2,961,170. This big increase is attributed to the enormous increase in expenditures for the rural free delivery service during the past year. The receipts of the postal service for the year were $134,268,600 and the expenditures $138,885,812. The deficiency in the free delivery service is not definitely known, beyond the estimate made weeks ago by the Postmaster General that it would reach $227,000 by the close of the fiscal year. The deficiency, however, may prove considerably larger than that figure.

THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE

From the New York Evening Post.

As we summon the nations to celebrate with us the centenary of the Louisiana Purchase, we are apt to forget that to one of the invited guests the anniversary recalls anything but cheerful memories. In the May number of La Espana Moderna, Sr. Jeronimo Becker, Archivist of the Ministry of State, gives the history of the cession from a Spanish point of view. He rehearses in detail the familiar story of the transfer of Louisiana to Spain in 1763, in compensation for the loss of Florida to England, and of the tricky bargain by which Napoleon recovered the Territory, with six men-of-war to boot, in return for the bestowal upon the Duke of Parma of the improvised "Kingdom of Etruria"; Napoleon pledging himself never to alienate the Territory to a third Power. According to Sr. Becker, Talleyrand even went so far as to assure the Spanish Government, in return for the sum of $1,000,000 duly paid and another million promised, that the cession was to be merely ostensible, and that Spain might keep her province, after all! Three years later, the unscrupulous First Consul had sold Louisiana to the Americans; the Americans were laying claim to the Floridas as a part of their purchase; and the "Kingdom of Etruria" was still dominated by French bayonets. No wonder that Sr. Becker calls our joyful anniversary "a very sad date." A curious sequel to the story is that, in 1815, the Spanish Ministry entertained hopes of regaining Louisiana by the action of the Congress of Vienna. Labrador, the Spanish emissary, was urged to make every effort for restitution. Of this project he easily saw the futility, but he devised an ingenious plan of recovery of his own. The English, he wrote on February 13, were now in possession of New Orleans (or so it was believed in Vienna), and thereby virtually in occupation of the entire Territory. Though they were bound by the Treaty of Ghent to respect the American possession of Louisiana, this must be distasteful to them, and perhaps they would prefer to hand it over to Spain. The Duke of Wellington, he added, had personally expressed his approval of this arrangement. Of course, when this scheme was broached at London, it led to nothing. Sr. Becker has not forgiven France, but he nowhere expresses any resentment at the conduct of America. A curious limitation in his treatment of the whole historical question is that he seems to regard it solely as a matter of diplomacy and of documentary title, and closes his eyes to the fact that, whether Spanish rulers and statesmen were weak or strong, foolish or wise, their authority within the present boundaries of the United States was inevitably destined to be swept away by the tide of American expansion.

CLEVELAND BOOM ON WANE.

Bourke Cockran, now in Germany, figures it out that if the popular demand is strong enough to force Mr. Cleveland's nomination on the Democratic party, that same popular demand will be strong enough to elect him. Quite likely. At the moment, however, less is being heard of the Cleveland boom.—Springfield Republican.

PERRY HEATH AND ROOSEVELT.

The genuflections of Perry Heath's Utah newspaper to Mr. Roosevelt during the presidential visit to Mormondom are said to have been conspicuous and tireless. Mr. Heath is enthusiastic for Roosevelt—all the more so, perhaps, on account of the probing into his record in the post-office department.—Springfield Republican.

MUCH MARRIED SON OF MARS

STRANGE INSANITY OF LIEUTENANT McCUE—WINS BRIDE AND BECOMES A BIGAMIST.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—The story of Lieutenant William K. McCue of the First Infantry, United States Army, is one of the most peculiar that has come to light in many months. McCue, a handsome young officer, returned on June 8th from the Philippines. On the day of his arrival he wired to the War Department, and received word to report at once to Fort Porter, Buffalo. On that day he met Miss Viola Simon of this city, courted her, and in four days demanded her hand of her father. As his record seemed good, Mr. Simon reluctantly consented, and the marriage took place. Three days later they left for the East. The Lieutenant asked that a card announcing the marriage be sent to Miss Ida Westcott of Cincinnati, and it was this action that made Mr. Simon and the Lieutenant's friends here believe that he is insane, as Miss Westcott claims McCue married her four years ago.

While the young couple were in Chicago came news from Washington that the War Department was seeking the Lieutenant, and that charges had been made that he was guilty of bigamy. When Lieutenant McCue was interviewed in Chicago, on Sunday, he denied that he had a wife when he married Miss Simon, and he also denied that he ever knew Miss Westcott of Cincinnati. Yesterday the Lieutenant left his young wife in Chicago alone all day at the hotel, but appeared late at night, saying he had been at Fort Sheridan. He also again denied his previous marriage. The first wife, when interviewed at Cincinnati last night, said McCue had shown signs of insanity in his letters, which were incoherent, and she asked that the War Department relieve him from duty and place him in a hospital for the insane. The San Francisco bride has announced that she will return home today.
