WIRELESS ALARMS

SECRETARY WILSON'S PLAN FOR THE PRESERVATION OF FORESTS IN THE GOVERNMENT RESERVES—WOULD HAVE AUTOMATIC WIRELESS STATIONS, WHICH WOULD GIVE ALARMS WHEN FIRE BREAKS OUT NEAR THEM.

WASHINGTON, August 18.—The Star says: Secretary Wilson made an announcement today which is among the most interesting and unique that has ever emanated from the Department of Agriculture. Plans are in progress looking to the establishment of a wireless telegraph system of fire alarms in every one of the forest reserves under the control of the United States government.

"Our greatest enemy in the forests is fire," said the secretary. "Fire is the mischief maker and it has always been a problem with us to prevent them, or control and extinguish them, once they have become started. During my recent western trip the suggestion was made to me to investigate the practicability of establishing a system of wireless telegraphy in all our forests, for the purpose of announcing fire and calling all the rangers and squatters to the scene of the conflagration at once. I thought over the matter on my way home, and the result is that now I am arranging to send Mr. Moore, chief of the weather bureau, to the Black Hills reservation to make a thorough examination of the country, and report upon the proposition. If he thinks such a scheme practicable I think little time will be lost in establishing the system and maintaining it.

"While the plans are only tentative as yet, the general idea is to construct an automatic service, which will give the alarm when contact is made with the flames or excessive heat. It is proposed to divide the reserves into sections, with an alarm and receiving station in each section. Take the Black Hills reservation for instance. There are twelve rangers there, under pay from the United States. Each one of these men could be placed in charge of a station. It could be managed so that these rangers could sound an alarm independent of the automatic device, in case they observed the fire before the contact was made with the apparatus. The Black Hills reservation is sixty miles wide and 100 miles long, and you can see what a serious proposition it would be were a big fire to gain considerable headway, unannounced. With the wireless alarm arrangement these men employed by the government, and hundreds of other foresters, squatters, miners and others in the vicinity will be informed of a fire the moment it starts, and they can mount their horses and arrive upon the scene in time to check the flames and save thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of trees.

"When the suggestion was first made to me I was impressed with it and the more I think of it the more I am impressed. The only thing remaining is to determine the practicability of the scheme, and if it will work as we believe it will, one of the greatest steps looking to the preservation of our trees will be taken. If it can be made to work in the Black Hills reservation, it will be used in all the rest of our reservations, aggregating 70,000,000 acres."

This was all the Secretary would say concerning this new scheme. "Did your western trip have anything to do with the labor troubles in Chicago?" Mr. Wilson was asked.

"Not a thing in the world," replied the genial Secretary. "When I went west I went straight through Chicago, and when I came home I came straight through Chicago. The only person I spoke to either time was the man who sold tickets at the station."

"But didn't you look into the conditions which were responsible for the strike when you were with the sheep and cattle men in Denver?"

"No, sir," said Mr. Wilson. "That would savor too much of politics and I am not a politician. The object of my trip was to endeavor to arrive at some method for reforesting the vast areas which have been devastated of all trees. Something must be done to preserve the forests and along with the forests the water supply.

"Unless some step is taken soon, I believe disaster will come to the great Black Hills country. That as you know is the fourth greatest gold producing area in the world. A depth of 1,100 feet has been reached with no signs of a discontinuance of the ore, and I am informed that the supply will last for centuries. What appeals to me as a serious proposition is the gradual but sure extermination of the trees, either by fire or the woodchopper. There are acres and acres of bare ground there which must be reforested, or the supply of wood will cease and the operation of the mines made either impossible or so expensive as to be impracticable. The old forest areas are not even reproducing, and unless they are made to, our children will have to look to the 46,000,000 acres of trees in the Philippines."

"KAMEHAMEHA" ON POLITICS

THE HOME RULE CONVENTION AND CANDIDATE NOTLEY AND JONAH KUMALAE.

The Washington Star has the following from Honolulu, under the signature of "Kamehameha."

HONOLULU, August 6, 1904.—Politics are moderately quiet in our island territory. The reverberations reach us from Chicago and St. Louis, and we listen with interest—abated by the fact that we have no voice in the election of a President—and no noisy campaign before us. Our delegates to the two conventions are nearly all returned home. Governor Carter has still to arrive, after a most creditable performance of that as well as other important duties.

Meantime, our local party conventions are about to be held, that of the Home Rule being already past. This doughty party, although in apparently hopeless decline, does not yet give up the ghost. It had been looked for to merge itself mainly in the democratic party, which has, in consequence, of late enjoyed some revival of activity. But its old leaders, Kalaauokalani, a Mormon, and Theresa, widow of the late Delegate Wilcox, have been quite to the fore, especially the latter. The main and vital principle of the home rulers is "Hawaii for the Hawaiians," or the supremacy of the native vote.

I am unwilling to say the most characteristic, but certainly the least creditable act of this Home Rule convention was their nomination of a delegate to Congress. His name is Charles Notley, himself a moderately capable and quite well-meaning fellow, but having the very prevalent native incapacity for financial correctness. He was a defaulter some years ago for quite an amount in the Hilo custom house. This however, constituted no objection to him whatever in the minds of the home rulers, on the most of whose aboriginal minds the necessity for commercial integrity has as yet dawned only in a most hazy way. This moral deficiency of these home rulers was still further shown in their selection of a delegate to make the nomination of Notley. This function was performed by one Jonah Kumalae, who is at present out on bail, having appealed from conviction by a jury for conspiring with Enoch Johnson to defraud the territory. Kumalae was a prominent member of the late legislature. He and Johnson, in a very shameless manner, got away with some $250 for legislative expenses. Probably no one doubts of their guilt. But there is every reason to believe that no one in that home rule convention regards such an act as having any real oral obliquity, or disqualifying its perpetrator for honorable activity among themselves. They consider the prosecution of such an offender as purely persecution by the whites of a good fellow, who made justifiable use of his excellent opportunities. Kumalae and Notley both are thus declared thoroughly estimable. And yet any of these natives would vigorously reprobate a cruel or ill-natured action.

WEST HAWAII NOMINATIONS

J. L. BROWN AND GEORGE HEWITT NAMED FOR SENATE—HOME RULERS HOLD MEETING.

KAILUA, Sept. 8.—The West Hawaii Republican District Convention today endorsed J. L. Brown of Hilo and George Hewitt of Kau as the party nominees for Senator from Hawaii. The choice was unanimous. Kamaoaha, a candidate, retired from the race and made a nominating speech for Hewitt. Notley, Kalaauokalani and Kumalae held a large meeting here today. Kumalae showed pictures of Tom Johnson, the independent campaigner in Ohio and declared that Johnson was the supreme head of Home Ruleism in the United States. The natives were much impressed.
