MUKDEN, BIRTHPLACE OF THE MANCHU DYNASTY

and here in Manchuria the history of Mukden at this time as well as upon other occasions in the long period of the Russian occupation, was somewhat chequered. At first it was decided, out of consideration for the feelings of the Imperial family, not to occupy the capital. The town was free to the soldiery, but headquarters were stationed beyond the walls the Russians again drawing a very fine distinction between the implied and the precise meaning of an effective occupation. The days of grace were limited, however, and the friction between the Russian and the high Manchurian officials finally culminated in the crucifixion of a Russian soldier by order of the Manchurian Governor-General. In return General Grodekoff, then in command of the troops in the Mukden district, avenged the insult placed upon the honor of Russia by such a deed by a three days' pillage of the town. The troops rushed through the walls. Chinamen were massacred in every street, and the palace was looted. Rich silks, costly jewels, rare bronzes, beautiful brocades, together with the contents of the palace libraries, parchments, and documents hundreds of years old and of priceless worth, recording the history of a vanished age, were burnt or trampled under foot. Jade from Kashgar, incense-burners in exquisite cloisonne enamel, wonderfully carved cabinets, and chairs of beautiful design passed into the bazaars. In three days the pillage of Mukden was stopped, but in that short space incalculable mischief was wrought, and an indelible impression left upon the minds of the Chinese. When their work was accomplished the Russians left the city, and it was only a few months ago that the military authorities decided upon a second occupation by way of reply to an act of singular independence of which the Chinese authorities had been guilty. Upon the whole, and judging the Russian occupation of Manchuria upon a broad basis, impartially and altogether apart from the war, their treatment of the local population has not been without some little leniency. The country possesses, however, extraordinary powers of recuperation, and, while it is a smiling garden, a veritable paradise of luxuriant vegetation in point of fact, the good fortunes of its people quickly return to them under equitable treatment.

BREMERTON NAVAL YARD

ADMIRAL RAE SAYS IT WILL BE EQUAL TO THAT AT MARE ISLAND.

SEATTLE, September 5.—The department in Washington considers the Puget Sound navy yard one of the most important in the United States, and the intention is to in every way increase its efficiency; all talk to the effect that the department is dismantling against the yard is entirely erroneous; the Bremerton yard is considered of the first importance in naval circles. A statement to this effect was made yesterday by Rear Admiral Charles W. Rae, chief of the bureau of steam engineering, who is here to make a personal inspection of the yard. Admiral Rae reached Seattle Saturday night from the national capital, having traversed the continent for investigation purposes. He is now registered at the Washington, and when seen there by a reporter made this statement:

"Personally, I consider the yard of primary importance as I am assured the navy department does also. My errand here is to discover if there is anything necessary to a well-equipped yard lacking, and, as far as possible, repair the deficiency. According to reports received from the commandant there is a scarcity of tools at the yard. It only owns one steam hammer, for instance, and other things of a like nature are said to be needed at once. My mission is to collect data relative to the needs of the yard to submit to congress, to the end that the Puget sound yard will not be behind any other in equipment."

"There have been stories printed in a local afternoon paper to the effect that Bremerton has not been getting an even break with Mare Island on repair work," said the reporter. "Is it the intention of the department to, in any degree, make the Puget sound yard of secondary importance to that of San Francisco?"

"Stories to that effect are certainly not true," replied the admiral. "All naval people recognize the importance of your yard and take pride in making it capable of handling any work that can be sent to it. I think that there need be no worrying over any rumors that the department is endeavoring to boost Mare Island as against this yard. Puget Sound will get a fair break with all other yards."

"How does the Bremerton yard compare with that at Mare yard?" was asked Admiral Rae. "I have never as yet seen your yard, although from the reports on it that I have read, I have gathered a good idea of what it looks like and what can be done there. From the point of safety it is far superior to the Mare Island works. Down there the water is too shallow to make a safe passage for large vessels certain, while here there is absolutely no difficulty of that kind. From what I know there is no reason to suppose that the Puget sound yard is less capable of handling all work brought to it than Mare Island, and it also has the deep water advantage in its favor."

Admiral Rae will tomorrow visit Moran Bros., for the purpose of making an investigation of the progress on the battleship Nebraska, and on the following day will visit Bremerton, spending a minute study of the needs of the yard. He will arrange for some important machinery and will make any other recommendations as a result of his trip that may be necessary. His coming here was of his own choice. He considered, he said, that, as the new head of the bureau, it was incumbent upon him to become well acquainted with the plant. He states he will leave the city Thursday. He came here by way of the Yellowstone park, stopping off there for a week, as a break in the long journey.

If Elihu Root and Dan Lammont are pitted against each other for Governor of New York the real battle of the campaign will not be national.—Des Moines Register and Leader.

FRANK HARVEY TO RUN FOR SENATOR

ANNOUNCED LAST NIGHT AT THE FIFTH DISTRICT CAUCUS THAT HE WOULD NOT WITHDRAW.

Frank Harvey will make the senatorial fight on the Democratic ticket. He made this announcement last night at the caucus of the Fifth District delegates. A also notified the Inter-Island Com any officials today of his intention to remain in the field and fight for election to the legislature. From the development that events took yesterday afternoon, it looked very much as if the Democratic legislative ticket had received the blow that almost killed father. The Inter-Island officials declined to consent to Harvey as an employee, running for senator. Business and politics seemed to clash. Harvey took the matter under consideration when informed by the committee of Democrats who had discussed the situation with his employers, and announced that he would decide in time to announce his definite decision at the caucus of his district. He decided to run and so announced himself amid cheers of the delegates.

The delegates then caucused on names to be placed on the ticket at the convention next Saturday. The following were selected: John Emmelhuth, R. H. Trent, D. Damien, David Kupihea, Jesse Makalinal and Kamahu. It had been decided to place only four names on the ticket in order that the delegates from the outside precincts would have two places to fill. Those delegates did not attend the caucus so it was thought fair to give them a chance of making two nominees. A tie vote between Damien and Trent occurred. It is not unlikely that Damien will withdraw.

MADE PROPHECY TRUE.

Theodore Stavarche, living in the town of Hermazin, near Bucharest, had his fortune told 65 years ago by a gypsy, who said that he would die by the bayonet. He fought through the Russo-Turkish war, was decorated for conspicuous bravery at Plevna and Smarden, and never received a scratch. The other day, however, at the age of 75, he committed suicide with his grand son's bayonet, thus fulfilling the ancient prophecy.
