complaint. The eruption crept slowly up my limbs, and on the body, until it enveloped the whole frame. It gave me infinite trouble, with constant itching, crusting off of dry scales, and a watery liquid which would exude from under the scales. I treated it for over three years unsuccessfully, and was unable to check it until I began using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I used three bottles of this medicine, and was completely cured—my skin becoming as smooth and clear as before."

TOWN TALK

By The Man About Town.

The following is English as only a Japanese could write it. It appears on a label of some canned Japanese melon:

The melon in this can is carefully prepared with the finest material so that not only is it an excellent and nourishing taste but can be kept in any climate for years without rotting. It is as sweetly nice and convenient for household use as present to others and being garbifolious in quality.

"Tell the people up town to get their sand bags ready," was telephoned from the water front yesterday. "Why! Oh because the sailors from the British cruiser Cambrian have been paid off." By the way these sailors from the British vessel are a very jolly lot of men. They are fully as convivial as the American sailors but not nearly so profane or pugnasious. I heard some of the Britishers singing the other night. Strange to relate they were not singing any British air but an American rag time ditty. And they sang it much after the fashion of an Englishman telling an American joke.

Along the water front they say that a Sugar Tallymen's Union is the latest labor organization in the port. The organization is young but very prosperous thus far, for no dues are collected. The union has nothing but members, a chief and rules. The first rule is that no tallyman shall work until after he has had three ginjars under his belt. "Good tallymen always agree" is another precept. Other rules are to be made as the season advances.

We are to lose Prince Bert Peterson. Our Prince is going away. Efforts should be made by the Promotion committee to arrange with Bert to leave some of his new clothes behind and allow some of our handsome young men to sort of try to fill Bert's clothes; nobody could fill his boots, notwithstanding speaking of course, for Prince Bert is an ornament financially as well as socially to the Islands. The Prince who has been popular abroad as he is here, and a whole lot more appreciated, is going to San Francisco next month to meet some friends who desire him to engage in a mining deal. In fact a very big deal is on the tapis and I believe that Bert with his suave and polished way, is to act as the promoter. He is to go ultimately to London and then to Buenos Aires. The mining properties are located somewhere in California, the angels evidently in London and South America. Bert will be absent several months but he will ultimately return to Honolulu.

One of the first men to meet E. A. McInerney on his return was another of the several "prominent Democrats" in town. "Hello," he said, "did you meet any Democrats on your trip?" "Yes," said McInerney, "I met some, but they were scarce." "Same here," the prominent Democrat said. "They are scarce all the year round, but scarcest of all on election day."

I see that P. Maurice McMahon the Hawaiian poet of passion, has written to a local friend that he will open a curio store in San Francisco. From what I know of our erstwhile young bard I am inclined to think, and say this without any unkindly feeling for he never dedicated a poem to me, that Maurice belongs more properly on a shelf in a curio store than on a niche in the Temple of Fame.

I am told that during the recent disqualification flurry in the Supreme court, the justices were very highly complimented by Judge Gear, who appears ready to disqualify them all for almost any sort of case. The judge expressed his appreciation of the high legal ability of the bench before which he had the honor to appear, and of its fair minded disposition. "I can appreciate the qualities of the court," he remarked, "because I can remember how it used to handle my own decisions." Inasmuch as the court overruled Gear with a delightful freedom, the justices must have wondered what the former circuit judge really meant.

Incidentally, the disqualification proposition is said to have given the members of the court some unpleasant moments.

ments off the bench. Of course members of a Supreme Court do not talk of their cases while the cases are under consideration and are not disposed to discuss them informally at all, but equally of course there are moments when dignity is aside and members of the bar may talk at a justice just as a cat may look at a king, until the king objects. In such moments, I am given to understand, the members of the court have been having a hard time to defend their decision in the Nalley case, wherein they held that a member of the court may sit as a justice in a case in which he was actively engaged as counsel in the lower court.

There is still another interesting proposition brought out by the disqualification arguments. It was that of Gear, who was arguing on the effect on the legal mind of having given an opinion. "I did not always bias the legal mind in favor of such opinion," he admitted, for the following reason: "A lawyer may often try to win a case, knowing that the right is against him." I would like to hear a debate on whether the ethics of the legal profession allow this rule. Perhaps in justice it should be added that Gear said that he did not approve such a proposition.

I saw him the next morning. He was very sad eyed and when he spoke his tones were mournful. I inquired the cause of his abandonment to the subject. "Oh nothing," he replied, "nothing except that a man cannot show any convivial predilections in this town without getting drugged. You see they drugged me. Yes, sir drugged me so that I had to go home in a hack. But," he added with an air of satisfaction "something was the matter with the drugs they gave me, for I didn't begin to show the effects until after I have taken my fifteenth glass."

"So and so died the other day," I remarked to a friend last week. "It's the only decent thing he's done in the last twenty years," was the reply. Rather a complete knock, I remarked, whereupon he recounted, "O well," he said, "perhaps it is. I take it back. Nil nisi bonum. I don't know quite everything he's done during the last twenty years."

A lady friend of mine has lately become very much interested in carpentry as it is taught at the Normal School and has joined the class that is taught there twice a week. She has taken up the subject with all the ardor of the faddist. She is also a member of a church guild. A day or two after she had taken her first lesson in carpentry, the secretary of the guild sent postal cards to the members notifying them of a meeting. On each card she wrote "Bring your mitre box." The postal card for the student of carpentry happened to be delivered at the office of her husband by the post office authorities. He, remembering the enthusiasm with which his wife had dabbled in carpentry, in a spirit of playfulness changed the secretary's notation so it read "Bring your mitre box."

"Well, I think that's a piece of impertinence on the part of Mrs. So-and-so," naming the secretary of the Guild exclaimed the indignant wife when she read it. "How did she know I was taking lessons in carpentry, and what right has she to refer to it on a postal card? She may think it's a joke but I think it's in very bad taste and I'll tell her so when I see her. The id! She might as well have said on the postal card so that everybody could read it, 'Bring your carpenter tools.'"

And when the husband, to avert trouble from the secretary, told his wife the real fact, he had to make a very handsome peace offering.

A local fortune teller the other day succeeded in making one of the nicest "breaks" ever made in the soothsaying profession. The seer was consulted by a certain lady, in whose company were youthful daughters. "You have had trouble with your husband," began the mysterious person who looks into the human heart and reads secrets. "he is always staying out nights." There were explosive of laughter from the daughters, and the mother looked surprised. It happens that the husband in question cannot be dragged from his home after dinner. It would take a cable to haul him from his fire-side. The only family quarrels are

Foreign News By Cable

DISTRESS IN SIBERIA. ST. PETERSBURG, March 31.—Horrible stories of starvation and cannibalism come from the country of the Chukchi tribes, inhabiting the peninsula at the extreme eastern point of Asia. Travelers arriving from there state that many of the heads of families killed their wives and children rather than see them suffer, and then committed suicide. One father and daughter lived for weeks upon the bodies of a mother and nine children who had died of starvation.

LABORITES SCORE VICTORY. LONDON, March 31.—The government has decided to support the bill of the Laborites holding the funds of trades unions immune.

STILL ANARCHY RULES. SMOLENSK, Russia, March 31.—The assistant chief of the gendarmes here has been murdered in the street.

LAYING THE GUAM CABLE. SAN LUIS d'APRA, Island of Guam, March 31.—The shore end of the Japan cable has been landed, and the cable ship has begun laying the line.

WHY HE WENT INSANE. A Japanese arrived from Yokohama yesterday on the S. S. America Maru. He was demented and he went insane trying to study the English language. His untutored efforts to reconcile some of the innumerable contradictions and inconsistencies of the language probably tangled his brains. He had refused to eat anything for eight days before the vessel reached Honolulu and had wasted to a mere skeleton. He began to take a little milk yesterday. The man was put ashore at this place and will be taken care of by the local Japanese consulate.
