MYRTLES TAKE BOTH OF THE BOAT RACES

UNIVERSITY CLUB DEFEATS THE ELKS AFTER A HARD RACE AND A CLOSE FINISH—MYRTLES TAKE EVERYTHING FROM THE HEALANIS—GOOD RACES AND A GOOD NATURED CROWD TO WATCH THEM—LARGE CROWD PRESENT.

The Red floated supreme. It was cardinal everywhere after the Myrtle senior crew shot across the line yesterday two lengths ahead of the Healanis. The Myrtle supporters went crazy with delight and it seemed that nothing could heighten their noise and delirious waving of cardinal, but one thing did. It was when the Myrtle juniors won against the Healanis juniors by about the same distance as the seniors had won. It was then that scores of white gowned girls with the red sashes which told of their allegiance to the boys in the first boat laughed and cried and sang and nearly went distracted with joy. And why shouldn't they? Didn't the Myrtles win both races and aren't the Myrtles the best boys that ever lived?

And then there were cheers for the losers who struggled so hard but unavailingly against the weavers of the red. And then there was the third race between the Elks and the University Club in which the latter were victors. And it was a good race too. Enthusiasm was rife yesterday at Pearl Harbor and all of the crews received their share of the plaudits.

This the record: Myrtle Seniors, 10:23. Healanis Seniors, 10:27 1-2. Myrtle Juniors, 10:29 3-5. Healanis Juniors, 10:35. All Comers, 3-4 mile. University Club, 4:51 1-5. Elks, 4:56 1-5. The scene at the Peninsula was one long to be remembered. It was all that the imagination could suggest. The beautiful luxuriant foliage of the grounds so well known to residents of Honolulu formed fitting background for the bevy of laughing, gaily bedecked girls that wandered about on the shores of the lochs. The natural color of which was manifest in the green tinted fields of the sugar cane and the purple haze of the mountains in the distance were all heightened by the bunting which flew from the flag posts about and from the various craft on the lochs. The scene was a very pretty one and one that will linger in the memory for a long time to come.

As usual the crowd took the 9 o'clock train for the lochs. And such a crowd sixteen coaches and every one so full that they were literally running over. Along the route the trainload of people waved their many hued banners at every available object and made a pleasure out of that which generally proves tedious—the ride down.

Once arrived at the harbor the human freight soon discharged itself and then for the hour which people were forced to wait, games were played under the trees or one stood about and talked of the relative merits of the teams. Here also much money was wagered on the outcome and some were busy finding takers.

Soon after the arrival of the train the two senior crews pulled away up the lochs amid the cheers of the crowds on the shore, where Starter George Turner had charge of the affair.

The Judges' launch which contained Judges G. H. Gere and W. W. Harris, Timekeepers Clarence Crabbe, O. E. McCarthy and Judge A. A. Wilder sped up the course so that they could follow the boats back. The third judge was Albert Waterhouse who was stationed at the finish end.

Shortly after 10 o'clock the Senior crews crossed the starting line and away up the harbor the two crews sped, seasawing as they rowed. The water was perfectly smooth and the shells moved through the water fast and lively.

At the mile flag both of the boats increased their stroke and neck and neck they pulled for the finish. Cheering from the shore for the Blues after they had fallen behind a half boat length had the desired effect and the boys bent to their oars with a will and nearly caught the Reds who were evidently doing their best. It was a very pretty finish, and the boat's crews of both boats were given tremendous ovations.

The second race between the Myrtle Juniors and the Healanis Juniors was a close race from the start to the finish. It was a long, tedious wait of over an hour between the first race and the second race, but the crowd bore it uncomplainingly. A quintette club on board of the yacht Anemone which had taken a party to the harbor played and the crowd along the shore enjoyed it hugely.

The stroke of the Myrtle and the Healanis Junior crews was very much alike. A few times the Healanis pulled a faster stroke but did not maintain it for any length of time.

The finish of the race was very pretty. The Blues nearly overtook the Reds, but they had a hard crew to beat, and the Reds fighting like fiends crossed the covered line first. The Blues allowed their boat to drift across the line after they heard the shot which announced that they were beaten.

The race between the University Club and the Elks made one of the most interesting races of the day. People could see the start and the finish and that counts for a good deal when one is there to see boat racing.

The two crews were in fine trim and the All Comers race was a success.

When the first quarter mile flag was passed the two boats were nip and tuck, the second quarter the U's were a half length ahead and then with a tremendous spurt the U's raced home, and all that the Elks could do was to hang on to the tail of the U boat and crossed the line defeated.

Too much cannot be said for the way the U crew rowed. Their stroke was the prettiest of the day.

The third race over, the crowd spurred for the train and a boat. They arrived in town about 1 o'clock.
