WANT JAPAN TO SEGREGATE LEPERS

THE GOVERNMENT URGED TO TAKE STEPS TO PRESERVE THE COUNTRY'S FAMOUS SPRINGS—LEPERS FROM HAWAII AND ELSEWHERE SAID TO GO THERE AND INJURE REPUTATION OF THE PLACE.

YOKOHAMA, July 30.—The Japan Gazette says:
 In the hot-springs of Kusatsu, in the province of Joshu, Japan possesses a unique asset of therapeutic value, and it appears as if she were going to throw it away. The cures recorded at Kusatsu smack of the marvellous. They are not confined to any one class of ailment, though specific for some, but extend to almost every known disorder of the skin, blood and vital organs. There is even a well-authenticated case at the Springs of a cure of leprosy, a disease deemed incurable, though it may be said that the subject elects to reside on the spot continuously, partly from sentiment and partly from a vague apprehension that otherwise the curse might recur. Dr. Baetz, the famous physician, well known in Europe and Japan, once said that if Kusatsu had been situated in the middle of Europe, it would now be the center of a million of population, that hotels and accessories of all kinds would have been erected all around the healing waters, and ailing pilgrims and doctors would have visited it from a radius of hundreds of miles. We hold no brief to advertise the virtues of Kusatsu but in the interest of common weak humanity, as well as in ordinary fairness we are compelled to acknowledge the force of the general testimony to the unique curative properties of its natural mineral springs used under expert direction.

Such being the high reputation of the Kusatsu Springs in Japan, it is only natural that they should be reported to with great confidence by all classes of the people. It is not exaggerating to say that every "season," beginning with June, there is a concourse there of at least 2,500 sufferers from all kinds of the common ailments to which flesh is heir. These do not comprise only the lower classes. Notables from Tokyo, both foreigners and Japanese, notables from Yokohama, both foreigners and Japanese, and from all parts of Japan have been in the habit of availing themselves of the wonders of Kusatsu. Necessarily the reported cures of leprosy attract a great contingent of the victims of that mysterious scourge, nor is it strange that the rumors of those cures should have spread beyond the bounds of Japan. Leprosy, while not so general as it appears to have been once, is still endemic to a terrible degree among certain islanders and dwellers on coasts and estuaries, and many of these afflicted people have heard of Kusatsu.

While it is not known positively whether leprosy is absolutely contagious or not, Japanese experience has favored that view. For the last thirty years the lepers at Kusatsu have been rigorously segregated from other patients. They have been assigned to the lower part of the town, the dividing line being marked by a police barrier and a police-box occupied by an official night and day. They have had their own springs, inns and other conveniences, but were absolutely prohibited from invading the non-leper section. Now, however, there has begun an ominous erasing of the dividing line. We are informed that among leprosy patients attracted to Kusatsu from abroad are a number of Hawaiians and Filipinos, dusky American citizens who decline to be segregated in Leper town and who are now quartered openly in the other non-leprosy section. They appear to have defied the police to remove them, and the police protest they are powerless. This would be bad enough though their number is said not to be more than a score or so of both sexes. But, as a result, their revolt is reported to have extended to the Japanese lepers, who refuse to undergo treatment that discriminates them from people whom they call "Kurumbos." These Japanese lepers are now swarming "all over the place," as one correspondent says. The effect is that the reputation of Kusatsu is suffering, and white people and high-class Japanese are banning the place. A correspondent writes: "I have already heard of some white folks who have refused to come here with such neighbors; others have shipped off after a day of it, and I hear some high-class Japanese from Tokyo have cancelled their engagement of rooms for the same reason. The police here seem quite powerless and apathetic."

The matter is one of more than local Kusatsu importance. These springs, as stated, are a very valuable national asset and they are being ruined by the local impotence to maintain proper regulations. Already the promiscuous quartering of Kanakas and Filipinos has broken down the barriers between lepers and others, and the result will be that no respectable people will visit Kusatsu and its value will be proportionately depreciated. This is a sub-of the scientific nature of these waters with authenticated testimony of their curative virtue, it is probable that permanent good would come out of this unfortunate anomaly, and the name of a well-regulated Kusatsu might eventually rival that of the Carlsbads, Homburgs and Marienbads of Europe. But the lepers must first be strictly segregated.

 Judge De Bolt yesterday denied the motion to commit John Beek for contempt of court for refusing to pay counsel fees for his wife's attorney in the divorce proceedings she has instituted against him.
