Bryan Satisfied With The Canal

NEW YORK (April 18.)—William Jennings Bryan, thrice defeated Democratic candidate for the Presidency, arrived in New York this afternoon from South America after a tour of that continent lasting many weeks. Mr. Bryan was looking very well, and although he said his trip had been one of the pleasantest and most instructive he had ever taken, he was happy to be home again.

Down the bay the tug John J. Timmins, having on board a delegation from the Circumnavigators' Club, of which organization Mr. Bryan is the latest member, met the steamship Caracas, on which Mr. Bryan came home, and took him off and brought him up to the city, landing him in time to make many afternoon calls on old friends, among whom was Mayor Gaynor. The Nebraskan spent an hour with the mayor in City Hall.

Mr. Bryan spoke in glowing terms of the progress the Southern American countries are making, and added a tribute to army engineers who are building the Panama Canal. He came home enthusiastic about the canal, and said he was certain that Colonel Goethals and his assistants of the Engineering Corps of the army would have it finished on schedule time.

The homecoming of Mr. Bryan was different today from the homecoming from Europe and the Orient of several years ago. Then he was welcomed by a multitude, and thousands acclaimed him as he landed at the Battery and other thousands kept up the welcoming up Broadway. Today there was no brass bands, and the multitudes failed to gather.

On the Timmins to greet Colonel Bryan in behalf of the earth-circlers were J. H. Birch, Jr., of Purlington, N. J., and F. H. Love, C. Schultz, E. H. Patterson, J. D. Morrison, and W. Tyree Stevens, of New York. Mr. Birch shouted through the megaphone that they wanted to take Colonel Bryan off. The Colonel smiled back his acceptance, and after getting his hand luggage together for the customs inspection he was lowered aboard the tug.

"South America," Colonel Bryan said, "is great, and there are vast chances there for the new settler, and I expect that between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 people will emigrate to that continent within the next fifty years."

Mr. Bryan added that he did not think this emigration would come from the United States. Then he added smilingly that all the high prices were not to be found in the United States. Then somebody mentioned the Panama Canal, and immediately Colonel Bryan was enthusiastic. It was plain that the opponents of the "big ditch" won't get any support from Lincoln.

"The Isthmian Canal," he said, "is a wonderful piece of work and I believe that the engineers will finish it on scheduled time. The organization of the work is truly wonderful. I was particularly impressed with the commissary department, which I took pains to visit. I was on the isthmus nine days and enjoyed every minute I was there."

Then somebody said something about politics and asked Colonel Bryan what he thought the chances of Democratic victory in the next election were.

"The chances of the Democrats," he answered, "are always good, but you must let me get home and get the run of things before you ask me to talk on national issues."

Next in order was a question as to whether he would ever run again for the Presidency.

"I have answered that question once and will not discuss it again," Colonel Bryan replied.

Just as the tug was nearing the pier at the foot of West 24th street, Colonel Bryan reverted to South America, and said that very few people down there were antagonistic to the United States. He said he did not meet anybody who was opposed to the Monroe doctrine.

Mr. Bryan said that he did not intend and had not said in the letter read at the Jefferson dinner in Washington that free silver was an issue at this time. What he wanted to say, he added, was that the President had admitted that it was right in 1906.

There was a little messenger boy standing in front of the mayor's office when Mr. Bryan looked at the lad a moment and then extended his hand.

"Hello, Harry," he said. "When did you desert Lincoln?"

"About two months ago, Mr. Bryan," the boy answered.

Then Mr. Bryan tapped him on the shoulder and told him he must make a fine record in New York so that the people from home would have a good reputation in the metropolis. Harry said he would try. The boy was Harry Bernstein, 14 years old, of Lincoln, Neb. For three years, he said, he had sold papers to Mr. Bryan in the home city.

From the City Hall Mr. Bryan hurried up town to dress for the dinner of the Circumnavigators' Club at the Hotel Astor.

RUSSIANS WORRY THE SUPERVISORS

BOARD OF HEALTH EXECUTIVE REJECTS A BILL FOR GARBAGE SERVICE AT THE RUSSIAN CAMP—SUPERVISORS REFUSE TO HAVE QUARANTINE SERVICE SHOULDERED UPON THE MUNICIPALITY—QUINN AND WILSON HAVE MILD SHOWDOWN.

Reports the consideration of which was deferred at the previous meeting were received from the health committee at the meeting of the Board of Supervisors last night. It was recommended that no change be made in the agreements with the Queen's Hospital and the Kapiolani Maternity Home before the beginning of next half-yearly period. As, however, the directors of the Maternity Home had demanded an increase of the per diem rate without waiting for the Board's action, that matter was referred back to the committee.

The road committee submitted a bill against the Board of Health from the garbage service for work at the Russian camp at Iwail which the president of the Board of Health had refused to pay. It was referred to the health committee.

A member of the health committee related the action taken by City Physician Mackall in dealing with a fatal case of diphtheria at the Russian camp. As Dr. Mackall could not find the president of the Board of Health until noon yesterday, on the advice of the committeeman he ordered the family quarantined. President Mott-Smith, on taking up the matter, decided to keep the family in quarantine and burn the house where the case had occurred.

Before the Board adjourned Supervisor Logan of the health committee suggested that Dr. Mackall be given instructions how to act in the event of other cases of diphtheria occurring in the Russian camp.

In the course of the discussion Deputy Attorney Milverton advised the Board that the charter did not give the power of quarantine to the municipality, and it seemed the unanimous sense of the members that the Board of Health was solely responsible for the handling of contagious disease. Mayor Fern expressed himself strongly against the assumption by the City and County of any obligations on account of the Russian immigrants. At the same time they should be treated like human beings.

On motion of Supervisor Quinn it was voted that the health committee should wait on Governor Frear and inform him that the Board of Supervisors would have nothing to do with quarantine matters.

About a score of permits to dairies under the milk ordinance were granted.

A letter from Road Supervisor John H. Wilson complained of having received an insulting letter from Chairman Quinn of the road committee. The objectionable missive was enclosed. It related to the sanding of crossings in rainy weather and the oiling of streets, and concluded with the advice to Wilson to resign if he could not carry out the orders of the board.

A motion carried to have the trouble investigated by the Board, whereupon Quinn at some length detailed some of his disputes with the road supervisor.

Aylett started to make a speech, when another member asked, "Is this the investigation?"

The question was answered by Supervisor Ahia's motion that the letters be accepted and placed on file. As Wilson in his letter declared he was always desirous of obeying the board, and as Quinn had given his side of the case, the motion carried and the incident was closed.

Quinn brought in an amendment to the Fort street paving ordinance, to cure its defect by supplying it with a title. Aylett objected that it was impossible to make such an amendment on third reading, as the bill had passed second reading by title. The majority was against him and on a motion to pass the bill as amended he moved to add the words "on third reading." Again the majority was too many for him, being joined on this occasion by McClellan, an opponent of the bill. The motion to pass the bill as amended carried on the following vote:

Ayes—Cox, Kane, Logan, Quinn—4.

Noes—Ahia, Aylett, McClellan—3. A good deal of routine business was done at the meeting. Petitions for lights in various parts of town were received.
