Over the Teacups

By Lady Gay

There seems to exist in every married woman, an ardent and insatiable desire to tabulate and regulate to her own advantage the special requirements of her husband.

And to assert an individual authority over what she may call his waywardness, shifting over to her own shoulders the complete responsibility of marriage and parenthood without in the least reasoning out just why. It is a most peculiar condition, that of marriage.

From one far corner of the world comes one, and from its remote antipodes another.

The condition and regulation of each life has developed a certain set type of character.

And life in the abstract is viewed by two entirely different standpoints.

By some unseen force these two souls have been attracted to each other.

And so they are married.

The first year of life together is one filled usually with discordant regulation, the cog wheels of daily routine generally creaking with doleful friction.

By a process of elimination, the characters are sometimes moulded into a more adaptable system.

And as the years are added to a matron there usually develops in her a maternal condescension.

The more admirable traits of her husband are urged to publicity, while his weaknesses are diplomatically kept from view by means of feminine tactics.

When this attitude is tempered by generosity, the result is ordinarily all that is desired for domestic peace and harmony, but too obvious a tightening of the thumb-screws always proves disastrous to felicity.

Unlimited tact is essential to every matron of every graded class of society where a husband and his pocketbook are concerned.

A lady, evidently lacking in tact so far as this latter was involved, remarked to her husband that he no longer brought her flowers as he did so often in his bachelor days.

And his reply, let us hope, was sufficiently curt to awaken her to a sense of the situation.

"I know, my dear," is what her husband replied, "but in those days I could do what I liked with my salary."

SOCIAL NEWS OF THE DAY.

The post-Lenten festivities will begin from today in a round of activities.

The week's programme will include any number of formal and informal occasions.

Mrs. M. E. Grossman entertains this afternoon at a very large reception, in honor of Mrs. Nelson Baker Lansing.

Major and Mrs. Timberlake will entertain at an elaborate dinner party on Friday evening, complimentary to Judge and Mrs. Sydney M. Ballou.

Miss Grace Robertson, one of the most popular girls of the younger set, returned on Saturday from Hawaii, where she has been enjoying a delightful tour.

Quite a pretty romance which began in Honolulu about a year ago has culminated recently in California, when Mr. Stanley Richardson of Maui married Miss Roberts of California, whom he met in the Islands when the latter was visiting here for the winter.

Upon Miss Roberts' return the two young people became engaged.

Mr. Richardson is connected with the Baldwins of Maui, and is a son of Mrs. Richardson, the manager of the Glenwood Hotel in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Richardson are stopping at the Moana, and intend leaving today in the Lurline for their future home on the other island.

Mr. George H. Robertson will leave on Wednesday morning in the Sierra for San Francisco.

After a short stay in the metropolis Mr. Robertson will visit Byron Hot Springs for about two months.

To-day is a gala day at "Arcadia," as Governor and Mrs. Frear are entertaining all the children of the Territory who may care to participate, in an egg-rolling contest on the terrace.

The custom has been one long established by the President of the United States and his wife at the White House in Washington, and has been adopted here by Governor and Mrs. Frear.

About thirty-five ladies and gentlemen will assist the host and hostess.

Miss Juliette Atherton entertained at a charming dancing party at the Outrigger Club on Saturday evening, complimentary to Mrs. Bon.

This artistic thatched pavilion built out in mid-stream was festooned about the eaves with long graceful strings of red and pink Japanese cherry blossom lanterns, the interior being inclosed by fronds of palms.

In one corner Kaal's Quintette played and sang during the evening screened behind a barricade of fish-tail ferns and potted palms, a graceful acquisition.

Miss Atherton and the guest of honor received in a bower of palms, and although about thirty couples had been bidden to this pretty affair, not all accepted owing to Holy Saturday.

The grounds and entrance were all festooned with Oriental lights, and fruit punch and other delicious light refreshments were served in one of the thatched tea houses under a hau tree arbor, so characteristic of this dainty spot at Waikiki.

Among those present were Mrs. Bon, Miss Myrtle Schuman, Miss Belle McCriston, Miss Laura Atherton, Miss McKenzie, Miss Martha McClesney, Miss Ruth McClesney, Miss Helen North, Miss Muriel Howatt, Miss Davis, Miss Carrie McLean; Messrs. Jack Guard, Charles McWayne, Bob, McCriston, Guilford Whitney, Mr. Larsen and Judge Lymer.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald of Santa Rosa, who were while here the incentive for many charming occasions, left for their home on the mainland in the Siberia on Friday.

The ladies of the United Service Bridge Club met this afternoon in the Ladies' Annex of the University Club.

Luncheon will be followed by cards. The regular meeting, which fell on last Monday, was necessarily postponed owing to the last of the Lenten season.

But this afternoon starts again the social activities of the service society.

Mrs. Arthur Wall has issued invitations for a bridge party at which she will entertain on Thursday afternoon at her home on Kewalo street.

Little Interviews

MRS. T. J. JONES, Columbus, Ohio:—I have never enjoyed a visit so much as this one to Hawaii. You really have a Paradise here. I have but one complaint—these terrible mosquitoes made life miserable when I first arrived. Later I came across some Harmony mosquito talcum at Benson, Smith & Co.'s Rexall Store and by its liberal use I was able to keep the little pests away and enjoy the beautiful evenings out doors. It was the talcum that made me decide to come again next winter.
