STANDARD OIL DECISION

There is an undisguised belief that the decision favors the interests.

Agreeing with his colleagues on the main issue in the case, Associate Justice Harlan delivered extempore a critical review of the decision of the court which echoed through the chamber with electrical and sensational force.

Harlan Charges Compromise.

Stripped of its judicial verbiage the ernment of the powers of another—the rights of the executive branch by the judiciary, in other words—he declared that by its decision in the present case the court not only was overruling itself in decisions rendered on the very law under question, but was attempting to amend the Sherman law in an important section where successive congresses had declined to act.

The import of his utterances, in fact was only second to the decisive and binding force of the decision in which

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER.
Creator of the greatest of all trusts.

Justice laid at the door of his associates a charge of having compromised with their legal conscience and stepped outside their constitutional rights.

He did this, believing at the same time that the judgment of the court was right, but firm and sturdy in his conviction that the decision went only half way toward remedying the evil to which the court of last resort had applied itself.

Justice Harlan reads the law and so declares that "restraint" of trade is a violation of its provisions, and that there can be nothing reasonable or unreasonable about it.

A given case, according to the Jushe had already joined, "Every one knows," he declared, "that since 1897 at each session of Congress attempts have been made to get the Sherman anti-trust law amended so as to make legal 'reasonable' restraint of trade. The law never has been amended in this particular. In my judgment it never will be amended along this line."

Lawyers bent forward and listened eagerly to the words of the aged jurist. At one time the murmurs that went through the room were so noticeable as to call down a warning tap from the marshal of the court.

"In the thirty-five years I have served here," declared Justice Harlan, "I

FRANK B. KELLOGG,
Special prosecutor, who handled the case against the trust.

think the most alarming tendency of the country that I have encountered—that is, in my judgment—is to be repealed by the court, provided the restraint is there.

Dissent Causes Furor.

Delivered with all his wonted force and vigor, Justice Harlan's critical view created such a sensation in the Supreme Court chamber as had never before been witnessed in those serene and solemn precincts.

Speaking without notes, almost oratorical in the earnestness of the warning which he uttered against the usurpation by one branch of the gov-think the most alarming tendency of the country that I have encountered—that is, in my judgment—is to be repealed by the court, provided the restraint is there.

"When those interested in legislation and opposed to it can not get a repeal of it by Congress they turn to the courts. From the judges they try to get interpretations and constructions they most desire.

Amendment to Constitution.

"The constitution," said the Justice, "provides there shall be three coordinate branches of the government—the legislative, the executive and the judicial—each with clearly defined duties. This decision today says the judiciary, by its action, shall amend the constitution."

The thought is one that has been in the minds of thousands. It has been seized with avidity tonight, and is being given utterance to by scores of public men who are looking beyond the overthrow of the Standard Oil Company to the principle which, in the view of Associate Justice Harlan, has been established by the court.

Senator La Follette of Wisconsin is out with a statement, giving scant praise for the overthrow of the trust and scathingly rebuking the attitude to which Justice Harlan with more judicial calm points.

The more conservative Senator Culberson of Texas inclines to the Harlan view.

Even Senator Kenyon of Ohio, late assistant to the Attorney-General, himself a prosecutor of trusts, sees little in the decision to rejoice over. He will press his measures in the Senate to provide for the criminal prosecution and imprisonment of trust offenders.

Only once in a generation is a scene enacted such as that unfolded in the chamber of the Supreme Court.

In anticipation of the decree crowds thronged the corridor just off the Senate lobby which leads to the courtroom.

Inside every available seat was taken by curious spectators, who sat in awed silence while the Associate Justices droned off in scarcely audible tones the decisions that preceded the piece de resistance of the day.

The background of the setting was the line of nine eminent jurists in black, each a type in himself, severe visaged, stately, solemn, holding in their keeping the fate of that gigantic structure, Standard Oil—menace and fetich of the modern world.

THE THEATERS

Skatell is the name of the famous new team which will make its first appearance at the Bijou tonight, fresh from the mainland and recently from New York, where they have been giving their wonderful clog dancing act on roller skates, before packed houses. The mainland papers describe the act of the Skatells as one of the most difficult yet attractive, of its kind. Foley and Earle were a clever clog dancing team and became favorites, as their foot-tapping work was the catchiest, but the Skatells go them one better by doing exactly the same dancing on roller skates, and then do much more besides. They waltz and do many difficult and weird feats, all on rollers.

They are experts on roller skates, as during the roller skating craze a few years ago they were featured, separately and before they were married, in all the large rinks of the United States. They met in a contest in Chicago and there their romance began, and they were married. They perfected their present act after about a year's hard work, and presented it originally in New York. Nothing like it has ever been seen here.

They will make their appearance on the program tonight with Eva Mudge the "Military Maid," who will give several clever character changes, appearing in each character of her sketch. She will again present the "Highwayman" character and scene, pronounced one of her best. This is one of the cleverest acts in vaudeville, and is presented by a petite and pretty young woman. New moving pictures.

Savoy.

At the Savoy "Bobby" Pulliam, singer of coon melodies, will change her songs somewhat and will give one in particular which is a catchy selection. This is "Hip-Hip-Hypnotize Me," followed by "Heaven Protects the Working Girl." She is now wearing one of her famous silver gowns, this one weighing thirty pounds. George and Gott, the black-face comedians, will put on a lively and funny sketch entitled "The Fast Mail," full of comedy and side-splitting situations. New moving pictures throughout.

Empire.

At the Empire a new artist will appear on the stage tonight. Alfreda Van Ness, a soprano singer, whose specialty is operatic, as well as high-class selections, will sing for her initial number "My Hero," from "The Chocolate Soldier," one of the hits of the season. She will also sing "Karisima" and "Dreams Is Dreams." She arrived on the Lurline. Pastor and Merle, the favorites of the Empire audiences, will by special request, put on "The Lazy Athlete" again, in which Pastor will give a wrestling match burlesque, which he has just originated. It is just as funny as any of his former successes. Miss Merle is down on the card for more of her catchy melodies. New films.
