MANCHUS TURN TIDE OF WAR

THURSTON TAKES UP M'CARTHY

There were no fireworks to speak of at the public meeting that was begun this morning in the Senate chamber at the Capitol. The H. I. delegates arrived a trifle late, but the meeting at which the Hilo wharf matter was discussed was not opened till Dr. Elliot, D. E. Metzger, Judge Wise and C. E. Wright arrived.

The whole morning was taken up by Lorrin Thurston, who presented the Hilo railroad side of the matter. He went into the history of the first railway enterprises on Hawaii, and told how, step by step, mainly through the work of B. F. Dillingham, the railroad system of the big island has grown.

In starting his speech, Mr. Thurston turned to Colonel McCarthy, who is one of the harbor commissioners, and reading some extracts from the Bulletin and The Star, asked if the colonel had been correctly reported in the papers.

"Did you say that the agreement was rotten? Did you say that you opposed the proposed agreement? Did you remark, 'I never heard of such gall?'" were some of the questions asked McCarthy by Thurston. "I did say all that," was McCarthy's reply.

"Then," said Thurston, "I must say that I am surprised, and that I regret to hear you admit it. As a member of the harbor commission I think that you should have refrained from such remarks, Mr. McCarthy. The proposal is not rotten, and it is made in good faith. I believe so strongly in the bona fides of the project that I think that, even with the pre-judgment of Colonel McCarthy, the matter will be favorably considered."

Mr. Thurston talked for almost two hours, and he went into every phase of the wharf matter. He produced maps and plans that showed the different schemes for the wharf. He explained how the deep water ships could be loaded and discharged. He went into the most minute details and showed a thorough grasp of his subject.

Speaking of an afternoon contemporary, the speaker, remarked that the reporter, who said that secrecy was observed about the wharf matter, (Continued on page five.)

FIFTH CAVALRY TO HAVE INTERESTING MANEUVERS

Some very interesting maneuvers will be performed at Schofield Barracks next Monday night, in which the entire regiment will participate. Every month four "problems" are presented to the regiment for execution. The one to engage the regiment on Monday night is called an "outpost problem," and will especially involve the signal detachment and an imaginary enemy.

Colonel Wilder will be in charge of the maneuvers and is manifesting a keen interest in the results, for he states that the Fifth Cavalry is the only regiment in the service provided with other means of signaling than flags, and on Monday some of the apparatus will be given a trial for the first time. The results will be carefully scrutinized in Washington for this reason.

One of the instruments to be used is known as the "cavalry buzzer," which is a combined telephone and telegraph instrument. It is a field telegraph, the wire being on the ground. It is stated that a man on horseback can lay it while riding at a gallop.

Another means of communication to be used will be acetylene lanterns. Signals from these will be sent by long and short flashes. Such a signal light has been read at a distance of twenty-five or more miles. The distance from which it can be read will depend largely on weather conditions. For night work the acetylene lanterns perform the same service as the heliograph does during the day.

The latest instrument that the Fifth has been provided with is the field wireless. On Monday night both of these instruments will be put up for the first time. One has been used a few times and communication was established with the naval station (Continued on Page Eight)

Ladies Declare Volcano Greatest Sight In World

A family party from Minneapolis touring the world arrived in the Maun Kea from a visit to the volcano. Its members are Misses Mary and Anna Harrington and their niece, Miss Margaret Harrington. Tourists more enthusiastic over the wonders of the crater of Kilauea and its environment have rarely been met.

"We can not say too much of the pleasure we have enjoyed on the volcano trip," said Miss Anna Harrington to a Star man this morning.

"We have been away from home for three years, traveling around the world. The volcano is the most wonderful sight we have seen in all our three years' travel.

"We stopped at the Crater House, kept by Mr. Peter Lee and he entertained us with stories of the volcano covering its history for many years past.

"Then we took trips which we would not have ventured upon if he had not urged and encouraged us. Mr. Porter, the house chauffeur, also was so intelligent that it added very much to our enjoyment of the trip. Our stay at the hotel was exceedingly pleasant.

"The volcano was splendid. We went to see it on two evenings, the second night giving a better view than the first. The crater seemed to be filling up. It was raining the first night, somewhat dimming the interior, but the second night was very clear.

"There was a continual roaring and spouting of lava. Oh, it was wonderful. I would not have grudged a trip around the world just to see that volcano alone.

"And the boat," Miss Harrington digressed, "we could not have expected anything finer—no storm or any trouble. We had the pleasure also of seeing the comet this morning from the steamer. It was beautiful.

"What a pity it is that, in the large cities of America, there is not more published about the volcano. We never heard about it until we got to Japan. (Continued on page eight.)

THE STAR'S NEXT GREAT ADVANCE

The Star is to be enlarged. Soon after the Greater Star was launched in February last, the promise was given its readers that important improvements would be made in the paper from time to time, as rapidly as circumstances would justify. This promise has been kept, as the increased size of the paper, improved service, including new and up-to-date features; and the assembling of every conceivable thing that goes to make up the modern, city newspaper—fully attest.

As a fitting part of the campaign of improvement, an extensive subscription program was mapped out, and is now under way; the object of which is to attract public attention to the merits of The Hawaiian Star of today. This campaign, or contest, is proving an unqualified success,—as might have been expected, however, of a booming newspaper. New subscriptions are coming in hourly, and this department of The Star's business is just now about the liveliest quarter of Honolulu.

Several years ago The Star was made a six-column paper, the columns be-

Portuguese Comment on The Late Unpleasantness

O Luso: Some uncharitable "white man" will now arise and ask, "Who dictated the letter from the Hawaiian Indignation Committee accepting the apology of the president of the Hawaiian Gazette Co., Ltd., in re the Advertiser Bystander supposed insults to the Hawaiian people?" Some other people will want to know who is the "Pole Cat" in the controversy—the president or the editor of the incontinent offender or the real offender of another daily.

"A tempest in a teapot" about describes all this row between some patriot Hawaiians and the editors of some local English dailies. There is truth and reason on both sides, but the real trouble is that both have run away from the real issue—the propriety at this late date for the delegate to make war on the governor of this Territory. This should be the issue alone, and a discussion of it will certainly interest the people, Hawaiian or otherwise. Some Hawaiians, as well as some other people, are very sensitive and touchy at times when the naked truth stares them in the face. This is a time for such people to harden their skins and cover themselves with real manhood, and, if in the truth they find out their failings, then be up and doing and correct the evil as best they may. In this whole lamentable episode the O Luso is neutral and thus can and does, in an unimpassioned manner, look at and discuss the situation. Forget the supposed insults and slurs and tackle the issue—the fight between the delegate and the governor. Here, we are convinced, that both are at fault, to a certain extent. But as the complaining party has no apparent successor to the governor, unless it be himself, we see no reason why Mr. Frear should not be reappointed. He is an able, conservative man and official, and the good Lord alone knows what we would get if the schemers who are using Kuhio to further their own interests should mayhap succeed.

Road Overseer Wilson Maintained In Office

Charles B. Wilson was confirmed in the position of road overseer for Honolulu district, against the attack of the road committee, by a vote of four to three at the meeting of the Board of Supervisors last night.

Those voting for a resolution to dismiss Wilson were the three members of the road committee—Arnold, Dwight and Low—and the combination that squelched the effort consisted of Amana, Kruger, McClellan and Murray. The debate preceding the vote was not particularly warm, considering the tropic breezes that had prevailed outside before the meeting. Probably the most interesting feature of the event was the demonstration that the lone Democrat, McClellan, holds the balance of power, is in fact the sole arbiter of municipal questions, while the present split in the Republican majority continues. Murray's boss only in name, as he can do nothing except by and with the advice and consent of McClellan.

There was a preliminary skirmish upon a resolution to amend the appropriation bill, cutting the county districts down in their monthly road allowance from the general fund, for the two ensuing months, as follows: Ewa, from $700 to $440; Waianae, from $400 to $250; Whialua, from $1000 to $620; Koolauloa, from $1250 to $790.

Arnold interrupted the taking of the vote on roll call, after Amana had voted aye, to protest against the reduction for Ewa. He charged that the cut was due to mismanagement of the work in Honolulu district, as shown by an overdraft of $3600, contending that it was wrong to make the country districts suffer in consequence.

Low, when his name was called, also pitched into Honolulu road mismanagement as he characterized it. Murray and McClellan replied, denying that the overcharge was the cause of the necessity of reduction of county expenditures. The resolution passed first reading, five to two, Chairman Dwight of the road committee giving a silent vote with the majority.

Low himself introduced a resolution to appropriate $3600 to cover the Honolulu overdraft, but intimated that he had another resolution to offer dealing with Wilson. On the passage of the first one accordingly, he presented the following, which was signed by Dwight:

"Whereas, It appears that C. B. Wilson, road overseer of the district of Honolulu, City and County of Honolulu, has, contrary to the orders of the Board of Supervisors, overran his appropriation to an amount of about $3600, in less than three months, and thereby and in other ways has shown incompetence in the discharge of his duties, and a disregard of the orders and instructions of the Board of Supervisors; therefore be it
