

A recent magazine article tells of a woman of forty who finds a photo of herself taken at twenty, and in the first illuminating glance at it, is horrified at the changes that have taken place in her in twenty years that have passed.

There is no need for a woman to lose all the charm of her youth. Madame Sarah Bernhardt, now touring this country, is proof of this.

At sixty-seven, her voice, her gestures, her figure, her step, have all the charm and grace of a young girl's. But most women let the graces of youth slip from them, and then when gone, make frantic efforts to regain them.

With many women there seems to be a settled notion that with the coming of age must come certain signs of age. They accept the fact, with all the resignation they can muster. But much of this idea is untrue. Certain signs of age can not be avoided, but many can be altogether, and others prevented from making their appearance until much later than is usually supposed.

The trouble is that with the coming of years, women slip into indolent habits. They are not alive all over as they were when young. If they will keep themselves physically and mentally young, age cannot find a foothold. Bernhardt is as alive as a young girl. She is interested in all the things of the day. She hasn't let her body get lazy. She has kept it right up to the mark, and so though she is sixty-seven, she does not look it, nor does she feel it.

And this is what a woman should do. Youth is a desirable thing. And the matter of looks is not the most important part, though this is worth while. But it is the spirit of youth that makes for joy in the world, and a woman should hold fast to this. She will be the happier for it, so will those about her.

Lieut. Blair of the U. S. Marine Corps will be the best man.

Those who went by water to Pearl Harbor on Wednesday on the occasion of the entrance of the first cruiser to Pearl Harbor, witnessed a most wonderful array of rainbows.

The mountains were covered with mist before the California started, but when she lifted her anchor a beautiful rainbow reaching from the mountains into the sea was admired by all on board.

This rainbow grew in brilliancy and followed the ship all the way to the harbor entrance, where those on board lost sight of it.

The ships behind saw the rainbow arched over the California as she entered the new harbor.

The California is probably the first ship to be followed and surrounded by rainbows on such an occasion.

The land of Chinese women who have been working during the past two weeks at the hall of the United Chinese Society making bandages for the Chinese Red Cross Society has been wonderfully interesting to outsiders.

A score of years ago such an organization would scarcely have been possible, and certainly the women would not have been allowed the use of the men's club room.

Twenty-four of these women went out, in groups of six, to people of their own nationality, with banners and cards asking for subscriptions to the Red Cross fund.

Others met day after day and prepared bandages which will be sent to China by the first steamer for the requirements of the wounded.

Among those present yesterday were some who spoke perfect English, and are very advanced in their opinions.

A son of Dr. Sun Yet Sen called in company with Mr. Frank Damon. This young man, who is a student of the University of California, is going to China to see his father, who is now on his way to China.

One of the exclusive social events of the week was the dance given at the Young Hotel on Tuesday night by the young women of Honolulu to the officers of the fleet.

The dance was given at the Young Hotel, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion. Big banks of potted plants and cut flowers were placed at intervals over the roof garden, with tiny colored incandescent lights scattered among the flowers, producing a charming effect.

The chaperones for the dance were Mrs. Cowles, Mrs. Macomb and Mrs. Swanzy.

Those invited were Alice Macfarlane, Miss Newmann, Irma Ballentyne, Helen North, Florence Hoffman, Ethel Bishop, Alice Cooper, Agnes Buchanan, Kathryn Stephens, V. Makee, Hatie Lucas, Grace Robertson, Helen Rockwell, Edith Cowles, Mrs. Tenney, Miss Tenney, Mrs. Noonan, Marjorie Allen, Dr. Johnstone, Mrs. Johnstone, Katherine Goodale, Miss Case, Ethel Spaulding, Ray Bell, Mrs. Bell, Dr. Tuttle, Mrs. Tuttle, Marjorie Freeth, Miss Ziegler, Miss Clark, Mr. McStocker, Miss McStocker, Miss J. of her husband's most intimate friends, she dispatched a telegram to each of them, reading:

"Jack hasn't come home yet. Am worried. Is he spending the night with you?"

The next morning, some hours after her husband had reached home and had described the accident to his machine that had detained him on the road, she received six answers to her telegrams, each worded practically the same:

"Yes, Jack is spending the night with me."

Thus do men instinctively hang together at the moment of a critical issue to one of their kind.—Lady Teazle in San Francisco Chronicle.

A BURLINGAME INCIDENT.

A man of the Burlingame set, happily married and very domesticated, was caught on the road in an automobile accident a few nights ago, and being some distance from a telephone, was unable to inform his wife of his predicament.

As midnight approached she became anxious, then restless and then hysterical, and recalling the names of six
