HAWAIIAN BEAUTY ATTRACTS ATTENTION IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles Times, May 3: "There goes one of the most beautiful women of Hawaii, and for that matter, of the world," remarked a globe trotter to a group of friends, as he pointed out at passing picture of radiant dark femininity in the lobby of the Alexandria yesterday afternoon. And when the friends saw the smiling beauty of the semi-Oriental type, a rare exotique in the flower garden of womanhood, they quickly agreed. The woman was accompanied by a large, heavily-built young man of apparent Hawaiian blood and inquiries revealed them to be Mr. and Mrs. George C. Beckley. They are of the royal blood of Hawaii, their lineage running way back to the days of the first kings, and their parents belonging to the reigning house until the annexation of the United States. Mrs. Beckley is the sister of Princess Kawannakoa, and herself was called Umilikakaumani, meaning the dove of peace, according to her interpretation. Her husband descended from the famous king, Kana Naka, one of the early rulers of the island of Hawaii. Together they arrived with the Shriners of Honolulu, a party of six or eight, the vanguard of those to come on Sunday. The natural bent of the native Hawaiian Princess was mingled with the polish of an American or European education and her features, more sharply chiseled than those of the average Hawaiian, gave indication of mixture of race, which is true, for her father was James Campbell, pioneer in the sugar industry of the islands and one of the very wealthy men of his day. He died twelve years ago, leaving three daughters, all educated in the finishing schools of other countries. Mrs. Beckley received her first taste of American education at the Merrill-van-Laer School, one of the most fashionable in New York, and later at Castle-on-Hudson. Her ideals are all Hawaiian. "What is the use of troubling about suffrage?" she questioned to a leading question. When asked about romantic experiences, strange adventures in her travels about the world she said it was too difficult to think about them. Her attitude was one of languorous ease, of indolent rest. "There is nothing interesting to say about me," she remarked in a soft, low voice, when asked for an interview. "Fond of riding? No, scarcely." "Sailing? Possibly." Travel she averred is her chief source of pleasure and that is why she is here. Several other very beautiful Hawaiian women will be in the party to arrive in a few days and she suggested waiting until comparisons could be made before adjudging her striking.

Abreu driving auto No. 32K, is alleged to have turned from Alaka street into King street without passing to the right of and beyond the center of the street intersection as required by law. Today's arrests include: Toki Uihara, supposed insane; Chow It, assault and battery.

MAHUKA JURY

(Continued from Page One) legal combat in which all of the attorneys engaged in the case took part. Arguments were long and hot, for the respondents are fighting every foot of the way, while the Government legal staff, consisting of United States District Attorney Breckons and his deputy, C. C. Biting, are not neglecting any precautions. Once the jury is secured, the problem will be simple as compared with that which confronted the court on the occasion of the trial of the first of the Mahuka site cases, for the main points of law involved have already been passed upon by the court and in this trial the evidence is all-important.

ODDS AND ENDS IN THE COURTS

Judge Cooper and a jury are today engaged in the trial of the three assault cases of H. Hackfeld & Co. versus Y. Ah Kong, doing business as Shing Kee. The suits, are for rather small amounts and are based upon three promissory notes. It is understood that the defense will be that, while Ah Kong does not deny having signed the promissory notes, yet he contends that he did it as a representative of the firm and not personally, and consequently is not to be held personally responsible for their payment. The Territorial grand jury will meet Friday to consider such matters as may be brought before it by the city attorney. Liquor Case. The trial of Roger James, indicted on two counts, one for selling liquor without a license and the other for receiving stolen goods, is set for next Friday in Judge Robinson's court. It is not expected, however, that the cases will come to trial at all, and no jury has been summoned. All the cases remaining on the criminal calendar of the circuit court will be set for trial by Judge Robinson next Saturday morning. Sentence of Fieid. Chung Nung, the Chinese convicted yesterday of the crime of having raped a little four-year-old Hawaiian girl, comes up for sentence by Judge Robinson next Saturday. The law prescribes either death or life imprisonment. Judge Robinson is known to be opposed on principle to the death penalty, so, as the law allows him to use his discretion, it is fully expected that he will sentence Chung Nung to imprisonment at hard labor for the rest of the Chinaman's life.

MAY FESTIVAL

Thomas Square is the background for one of the most attractive fairs or festivals given in a long while. Eight years ago the Catholic women and their friends gave a bazaar to raise funds for a school building and attained the result desired. Now the same women, with a church building fund to aid, have arranged a festival that not only will net a nice sum of money but will give pleasure to all attending. The attractions are many and as the entrance price is only ten cents, a mighty throng is expected. The place is large and there will be room for all, without the thought of being crowded. Several stunts new to fairs, bazaars and festivals will amuse you. Do not forget the day, Saturday of this week.

Stop That Headache and Save Your Nerves. De not try to endure a headache, waiting with what patience you can until you have "worn it out." Why should you? It's a great deal better to save your nerves the usual wear and tear of torture. One dose of Stearns' Headache Wafers (Shac) —a tiny tasteless wafer—brings you relief in a few minutes—real relief of that—leaves your head feeling clear and natural. When this certain case from that pain is always at hand (or at the nearest druggist's) there is no reason for suffering from headache. You would not consider it wise to suffer from a cinder in your eye or a thorn in your hand a moment longer than necessary. Think it over—and remember that Stearns' Headache Wafers cure, yet never cause the formation of a drug habit.
