OUR SAN FRANCISCO LETTER
Police Court Drama Vies With That of The Theaters--Story of Homer Littleton

By ERNEST N. SMITH.

(Special Correspondence of the Star.)
 SAN FRANCISCO, June 22.—When we want sentiment, when we seek the heart throbs that make us wince and thrill, when we want to escape our own troubles by listening to the solution of another's problem, we step into our good clothes and wander into the theater and for a few hours sit through the intricate troubles of the stage.

The acting may amaze us, the delicate touches of pathos may touch our emotions, and in the end we wonder at the power of the actor, marvel at his insight into the hearts of human beings, and declare him wonderful. How does he do it? Where does he get his inspiration? Do you ever wonder? I'll tell you one way.

Through the police courts of San Francisco sift the dregs of humanity, most of them whining a pitiful story of explanation in a futile effort to dodge the law. Day after day the cases drag along before a sleepy judge, the even tenor of the day only broken by the raucous bark of a police court lawyer trying to earn his fee. Occasionally a defendant of more than passing moment arouses the habits of the courtroom who crane and laugh and sneer as a shallow emotion grips them.

"Homer Littleton" called the clerk, and a young man walked out of the cage and into the dock. A policeman testified that he had defrauded two people out of the subscription price of a magazine, by failing to turn the money in to the agents. Not an unusual case to be sure. Nobody was stirred to particular activity. It was almost noon time, a long list of "drunks" had been "jugged" or released, and it was nearly time for the noon recess. The judge drummed idly on the desk, while the policeman stated his case. Neither he or any in the courtroom particularly noticed a little man sitting near the windows. He was strangely well dressed, had a wonderfully expressive face and kindly gray eyes and all the morning had watched every case with equal interest.

Littleton called upon to testify said he was guilty, and then losing control of himself he poured out a story with all the abandon of a frightened nineteen-year-old boy. Plainly, he'd never been in such a predicament before, the uncompromising faces about the courtroom unnerved him. He looked in vain for a shred of sympathy, a kindly look, a word of encouragement. Tearfully he told the judge he'd come from Wisconsin a few months before with $79 and a high hope of conquering the world. But jobs weren't easy to find. He searched the want ads, he tramped the streets, he moved to cheaper and cheaper rooming houses, until at last the little pile had melted away.

Someone told him he could make money soliciting magazine subscriptions and in desperation he tried it. It took him all day to get two, and he walked miles and ate nothing. At night hungry and forlorn he spent the magazine money for a meal and a bed hoping with renewed strength to do better the next day.

But he didn't; there came the demand from the "boss" for an accounting—and then things moved swiftly. He was caught by the police on a complaint and thrown in jail. Nothing unusual in that to the usual courtroom crowd, many of whom had been in jail numberless times. The dove went on as the boy, choking and tearful plead for forgiveness, a chance to do right—not to escape jail but because he'd done wrong—he admitted that, and wanted that chance to square himself.

"Aw, what's the kid whimperin' for?" growled a bum in the back seat staring with amazement that any human should worry about just stealing two magazine subscriptions.

"It seems like a sad case," his Honor remarked when the boy's story ended. Littleton looked up his eyes glistening with hope and tears.

"Your Honor," said the prosecuting attorney coldly, "this is a flagrant case, I would suggest that he be made an example of and given six months."

The nineteen year old boy cried out in startled alarm. He gazed wildly for a moment, and then sank down quietly his body a tremble, his arms quivering. He lay there crying a broken wail. The law had what was left of him.

"Your honor, may I interrupt?" said the little man by the window stepping forward briskly. He had a charm of manner, a soft musical voice and as he began speaking softly he had a power of persuasion that brought everyone up to attention.

"I don't believe he's really dishonest," said Judge, and I want you to give him an opportunity to redeem himself. I'm sure he will if his face is an indication of his character. He's thousands of miles from home, he's friendless, he's homeless, he's motherless," the little man spoke softly.

"I never saw him before, but I know men and I know boys. He's no criminal at heart. I'll wager he never did anything dishonest in his life before. It's terrible for a boy to be penniless miles from home. Your honor put him on parole for sixty days and I'll pay his expenses back to Wisconsin, to his mother."

He stood in front of the judge waiting, a bright smile on his features, a hopeful look in his eyes. This was no acting. He was face to face with a boy's destiny in his hands—pleading for a stranger whose heart he read aright.

"I'm David Wagfield, the actor," said the man. A moment later the boy was free, and Warfield, probably the world's greatest character actor was thanking the judge and explaining that while he was spending the summer in San Francisco visiting his mother he often spent hours in the police courts studying faces and characters and problems, and seeing some of the heart secrets and troubles of the submerged world laid bare.

BKTNE. HAWAII RESCUED BY TUG

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Two vessels arrived from distant ports yesterday with tales of stress at sea. The barkentine Hawaii, Captain Wikander, reported the worst experience, while Captain Olsen of the barkentine Mahukona reported the loss of his jib-boom upon two occasions.

The Hawaii sailed from Mahukona, H. I., twenty and one-half days before and until reaching the Farallones on Friday night nothing but the best of weather conditions were met with. Just off the lights a heavy gale began to blow from the northwest and before long nearly all of the sails had been blown away.

Without a tug in sight, Wikander managed to bring his vessel to a position just without the heads, but the adverse tide conditions and the continued wind drove him back to sea. Holding his position as well as possible until morning, he secured a tow from the tug Sea Lark and made port. The crew were nearly exhausted, as they had been about the battered deck all night, expecting at every moment that they would have to take to the boats.

The Mahukona sailed from Newcastle, N. S. W., eighty-five days previously with a cargo of coal to Hind, Rolph & Co. Ten days out of the Australian port a hurricane from the northwest blew away the jib-boom and on Friday night off the harbor entrance the same gale which worried the skipper and crew of the Hawaii caused the loss of the same spar.

AMERICANS FEAR BORDER WAR

EL PASO, Texas, June 21.—The military chessboard of northern Mexico as viewed tonight presents a series of likely complications along the American border, judging from the plan of campaign as outlined by Mexican federal officials.

Passengers from Chihuahua report a mutinous, dangerous spirit among the rebels and even go so far as to predict that the insurgents will put up no fight at Bachimba, but will flee toward Juarez and the American border. Coincidentally with the attack on the rebel strongholds around Chihuahua by General Huerta's federal forces moving northward, two distinct federal movements are shaping themselves on both the east and west sides of Juarez.

Scenting possible activity close to the United States, Adjutant General Hutchins and Colonel Walker, quartermaster general, both of the Texas militia, are here at the orders of Governor Colquhoun to take such measures as will prevent American citizens from suffering in case of fighting across the river.

Eczema, Psoriasis, and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they rapidly multiply, knowing their way deep into the sensitive tissue. This is what causes that awful itch, and what seemed a mere rash may grow worse and develop into a loathsome and torturing skin disease with its years and years of misery.

Don't take any chances! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with that soothing and cleansing wash, the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema.

We have had experience with many remedies for skin trouble but have never—never seen such remarkable cures as those from D. D. D. Prescription. Instant relief from the very first application.

If you have skin trouble of any kind investigate the merits of D. D. D. We know that D. D. D. will help you. Ber. on Smith & Co.

MISS LILLIAN MOODY, a graduate of this year's class at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., has been selected by the Palama Settlement management as supervisor of the girls' work at the settlement.

GOVERNOR FREAR and family are expected to arrive in San Francisco today, intending to sail for home in the Wilhelmina on Wednesday.

ROBERT CATTON will lecture on Robert Louis Stevenson before the Scottish Thistle Club at 8 o'clock this evening.

TOKICHI TANAKA, recently Japanese consul general at Seattle, has been appointed to succeed Senjiri Uyeno, now home on leave, as consul general for Hawaii.

STANLEY BEARDMORE, head book-keeper of the Waialua Agricultural Co., left by the Honolulu for a visit to his old home in England. He will be gone three months.

ROBERT LYDECKER, keeper of archives, expects to be home from the East the middle of July.

W. W. HARRIS returned in the Ventura from the Coast.

W. W. KIRKLAND was a returning passenger in the Ventura.

J. O. LUTTED returned in the Ventura.

GOLF, TENNIS, BATHING.
 Nothing is more invigorating than a game of tennis or golf and nothing more refreshing at the close than a dip in the ocean where the beach is free from coral like that at Haleiwa. Visitors pronounce it the best in the islands and the management of the Haleiwa Hotel are confident that the judgment passed by tourists is correct. At a cost of six dollars and fifty cents one may journey to Haleiwa on the limited Saturday afternoon and return by the same fast train Sunday night and that covers all expenses at the hotel and for transportation. It is a cheap trip and many persons are taking advantage of the low rate.
