Things Requisite.
Have a tear for the wretched—smile for the glad;
Have respect for the aged and pleasantly greet
The stranger that seeks for shelter from thee—
Who stray from the path where true happiness flows.
Have a laugh for the child in her play at thy feet;
For the worthy applier—an excuse for the bad;
Some help for the needy—some pity for those
Who stray from the path where true happiness flows.
Have a hope in thy sorrow—a calm in thy joy;
Have a work that is worthy thy life to employ;
And, oh! above all things on this side the sod,
Have peace with thy conscience, and peace with thy God.
—Harper's Weekly.

VARIETY.

Proverbs are the fruits of the longest experience, conveyed in the fewest words.
The best means of establishing a high reputation is to speak well and not better.
Happiness only begins when wishes end: and he who hankers after more enjoys nothing.
A SCHOOLMASTER'S PROVERB.—The suffer the head, the harder the work of driving anything into it.
We commence by being in love with our own thoughts, and follow by seeking to make others worship them.
Penitence does not spring from dread of punishment, but from sorrow over the inherent wickedness and guilt of sin.
Bread is the staff of life, and liquor the stilts—the former sustaining man, and latter elevating him for a fall.
It is a great blunder in the pursuit of happiness not to know when we have got it; that is, not to be content with a reasonable and possible measure of it.
The water that has no taste is purest; the air that has no odor is freshest; and of all the modifications of manner, the most generally pleasing is simplicity.
A town crier took in charge a lost child, and proceeded to hunt for its parents. On being asked by a lady what was the matter, he replied, "Here's an orphan child, ma'am, and I'm trying to find its parents."

A NEW CRIME—IMPORTANCE OF A COMM.—In a return received from the chief constable by the parish authorities, which records the dismissal of one of their police officers, the crime is stated to be, "For attempting to marry his wife, being alive."
A Western editor offered his wife a dime a week, or a share in the paper; the cute young chap unhesitatingly took the dime.
"Stockings I can do without so long as I wear fashionable dresses," said a village belle somewhat straitened in her financial resources, "but a bosom pin and kid gloves I must have."
The following extract from the London Weekly Times of September 25 is a melancholy example of the effects of permitting children to play with firearms. The precocious infant who died at the age of fifteen months only adds another to the already extensive list of deaths from similar causes.
"The coroner having briefly addressed the jury on their melancholy duty, and pointed out to them what he considered was the verdict they should return, the jury unanimously recorded their verdict that the deceased died from the action of the bullet of his own gun, after living a quarter of an hour. They also appended an expression of sympathy for the family of the deceased in their bereavement, which was a loss to both his family and to the whole country."

POVERTY A RELATIVE TERM.—Bulwer says that poverty is only an idea, in nine cases out of ten. Some men with ten thousand dollars a year suffer more for want of means than others with three hundred. The reason is, the richer man has artificial wants. His income is ten thousand, and he suffers enough from being dunned for unpaid debts to kill a sensitive man. A man who earns a dollar a day, and does not run in debt, is the happier of the two. Very few people who have never been rich will believe him; but it is as true as that the gods are true. There are thousands and thousands with princely incomes who never know a moment's peace because they live above their means. There is really more happiness in the world among working people than among those who are called rich.

Facts About Eating.
If too much food is taken the stomach cannot convert it into a perfect blood material, hence no perfect blood is made, and that being mixed with the other blood in the body makes the whole mass of blood impure; hence after an over-hearty meal a person feels bad all over. If the over-eating is habitual, there is always some unaccountable symptom complained of. Such persons are never well, and although they may eat heartily, they do not get strong nor fill up in flesh; it is because the stomach has been over-taxed, and has not the power to extract the nourishment from the food.
When persons do not get strong, although they eat as much as they can, they will get stronger by eating one-half less; as a sickly servant in attempting to do a large amount of work, did none of it well, whereas, if the task were a light one, the whole of it would have been thoroughly done.
When any uncomfortable feeling is experienced after eating, it is because some article does not agree with the stomach, that is, cannot be digested by it. This always arises from quality or quantity, generally the latter. In such cases take less and less until no discomfort is produced; if no special change is observed, it is because the quality is unsuited to the condition of the stomach, or the general system does not require it.
An article may not agree with the stomach today, but may agree with it very well in a few days, weeks or months afterwards, because its distinctive elements may then be needed in the system. Most persons instinctively turn away from roast pork in midsummer—it would make them sick—but in winter time, when the thermometer is near zero, large quantities are eaten with a relish, and no specific discomfort follows. As a general rule, instinct is the best guide, and that which is most relished is the thing which should be eaten; but if some discomfort invariably follows, it should be omitted, at least until a change of air, season, or occupation.
It is a physical and moral wrong to take a single mouthful when really it is not wanted; the motive being merely to "eat even," to eat it out of the way, or feeling that if it not eaten it will be thrown away by the cook. If thus thrown away some worm, or insect, or animal may get it; if eaten by yourself, it only oppresses the system that much.
The finer food is divided or cut up before swallowed, the sooner, the easier, and more perfect it is digested, for like ice, it is dissolved from without, inwards, and the smaller the pieces, the sooner they are melted.
Bread and butter, and milk, are the only articles of food which have all the elements of nutrition; hence from childhood to extreme old age, we are never tired of them.—Hall's Journal of Health.
