It is not 600 FAT SHEEP! impossible that in the future the great systems of education may be carried on simultaneously—the one philosophical and literary and the other

The report of the Massachusetts Agricultural College for 1872, has been the inspiration of these remarks. It is located at Amherst, the seat of the well-known college. Between the two institutions there has been only the most pleasant rivalry. The course of study in the Agricultural College is limited to four years. Tuition and board cost about $250 a year. The report states that the sons of farmers—for only those with experience make good students-can pass through the college for $1,000. The President with just pride points to the records made by two or three of his graduates in farming and invention.

The determined front exhibited by the farmers of the West towards the railroad companies, as I PAIR BEST PATENT PUMPS AND GEAR well as the belief, spreading with great rapidity, that science is absolutely necessary to the proper following of agriculture, bespeaks a great future for the agricultural college in the unproved form which in no long time it will be expected to put on. If the corporations guiding the agricultural colleges would look for support more to their patrons and less to the results of the sales of public lands; if they would begin to improve their institutions and cease to "lobby" for " pap," which, insuring to their benefit, falls as a heavy burden on the community, the immediate LUKA, KINAU, future of the agricultural colleges would look
