> [From the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle ] Tiltonian Battle-Hymn.

BY JOHN II. VATES.

"To min Beecher has been the only aim of his (Titton's) life"-Mrs. Tilton. Write it down, Mr. Stenographer. I despise the church

To ruin Beecher is the goal, To which I press with envious soul. This eagle that has soured so high-In whom so many thousands trust-Shall flap his great wings in the dust, And by my poisoned arrows die. Spirit of svil, nerve my coul!

Jelp me fill up the bitter bowl When I the dregs shall see him drink, When neath the waves I see him sink, I've reached the goal.

1'll ruin Beecher, though I bring Rain on them that to me chag: Though I my wife must sacrifice, And drag her good name in the dust-Though children weep before my eyes, Ruin this champion I must. Wif't brenk her heart? Well, let it break Let love his flight forever take. I've strained those strings to breaking, long -I hushed her bright soul's cheerful song And made her walk through floods of tears Wife? What is wife? And what are vows To them who do free love espouse?

> I'll rain Beecher though the good Bow down and weep o'er all the world. He who for right so long has stood Shall from his pinnacle be buried. Daughters of Zion go! Once more Sit down by Enhylon's cold streams ! Hung all your harps along the shore And weep hot tears o'er vanished dreams. Your Christ is human-not divine-And human they who in him trust. Your Plymouth sun shall cease to shice, Your Plymouth idol bite the dust. adayant rappent on Whatha

I'll ruig Beecher ? Ha! but hark! Methinks I hear all hell rejoice ! And men of earth, whose ways are dark, Join in the shout with hideous voice Like me, full well the wicked know That this long-planned, long-coming blow Is at the church—is at this Christ To whom I cannot be entired. Write it, and read with wondering eyes "The church and creed I do despise." Write it, and let the sentence shine, The Christian Christ is not divine I'll reach my goal, though in the strife I ride o'er church, o'er home and wife. This eagle that has soured so high, In whom so many thousands trust, Shall flap his great wings in the dust, ___ And by my poisoned arrows the Then I shall rise above him fall, The one "magnanimous" of all.

VARIETY.

A new game has been started in the wilds of Boyle county, Ky., called "Granger seven up." Three persons play for a can of oysters. The first man out gets the oysters, the last the can, and the " middle man," what he can.

A SKUNK STORY WITHOUT THE SKUNK .- The Bowling Green (Ky.) Democrat is responsible for the following: "One of our good citizens being aroused a little earlier than usual by the strong odor of a skunk, left his couch at early dawn and proceeded to make his homely toilet. Having drawn on his unmentionables, he stirred up the dying embers, so as to have a little more light, and then reaching round to the corner of the hearth for his shoes, proceeded to the front door to put them on. Happening to glance back, he saw a white and black something follow him. · Polecat!' he yelled, and made for the door, shoes in hand. Being closely pursued, he had no time to unfasten the door, and passed on around the room. Coming to the bed he shouted, · Polly, I'm going to jump in.' 'No you won't,' came from deep down under the cover, and so round he went, still hotly pursued. He endeavored to open the door again, but the enemy was upon him, and round he went on the second heat. Reaching the bed again he exclaimed, 'I'm going to jump in.' 'No you won't,' came again. 'Yes, but durned if I don't,' and dropping his shoes, in he went, and hauling the cover over his head, awaited the attack. Finding all quiet, after a time he cautiously peeped out, and with the in-creasing light discovered—not a polecat, but his wife's black and white knitting, with the ball of yarn in his shoes,"

How GEN. FORREST LIKED TO BE SHAVED .- The civil rights' bill may enable the colored gentlemen to enjoy all the privileges of soda water fountains, ice cream saloons, and billiard rooms—but we would like to see him subject his visage to the manipulation of a white barber. He would find him in as dangerous a position as Gen. Forrest. It is said that Forrest went into a barber shop on Broadway to be shaved. The colored gentleman who officiated was voluble. Forrest was in good humor and disposed to be talkative. At last it came out that the gentleman wanted to know if he was having the honor to shave Gen. Forrest of the late confederate cavalry. Gen. Forrest mildly assented. Whereupon the barber remarked that he was glad to Lake the General's acquaintance, as his brother was a soldier in the lederal army. "Where is your brother?" "He was killed at Fort Pillow," answered the barber. Silently and gently as the fall of the snow flake, but accurately and without hesitation, the General slid from beneath the razor of that barber, gained his feet, and with his face bare as to one side, and lathered to the other, remarked : " You can't shave me this morning!" A friend who met him a moment later, remarked the singular appearance of his face. The General merely observed: "I like to have half of my face shaved at a time."-Mobile Register.

A BETTING MOURNER.-A lake steamer was being repaired and repainted near one of the wharves of a western city. A single narrow plank served for communicating with the shore. A large quantity of white lead was provided for the painters, and one night, before going ashore, two of them, whom we shall call Smith and Jenes, thought they would appropriate some of it to their own use. So they tied strong twine around their over-alls at the ankle, and filled in the space between their trowsers and over-alls with forty pounds, more or less, of white lead. Going ashore in the duck of the evening, and walking clumsily in consequence of the unusual heavy loading, Jones stumbled overboard into the lake. Of course he sunk like a millstone. The alarm was given, and immediately there were hoats got out, and every preparation made for the rescue. Meantime Smith stood on the shore loudly bewailing-

"Oh, dear, dear! Jones is drowned! His poor wife and five little ones-what will become of them? And Jones is dead! Oh, dear, dear! "What are you blubbering about?" said a bystander. "Don't you see they are getting ready to haul him out? He's got to rise three times, you know."

" Wh-what's that you say?" said Smith. "I tell you, Jones ain't drowned-he'll be rescued. He's got to come up three times." "Got to come up three times!" repeated Smith, pulling out his money, and changing his whining tone to one of excited interest. "Bet you the stamps be don't come up once! "
