A Reverie.
Kissed by Eros's dreamy angel,
In the shadow of thought,
Memory, like a tide rolls o'er sea,
With the changes years have wrought
And I almost hear the footstep
Echo through our halls once more,
Footstep of the dear departed,
Now at rest on yonder shore.
Voices that were hushed forever,
Now seem filling all the air,
Fragrance, too, it shed around us,
From the angel wreaths they wear.
As I turned to look behind me,
Back into the halls of time,
Buried hopes go girdling by me,
With a radiant half sublime.
Angels forms go trooping by me,
Angels from the unknown shore,
And I feel would grasp their garments,
But they vanish as before.
Round my path in richest beauty
I can see the roses bloom,
Almost fresh their shining petals,
Almost breathe the sweet perfume.
Strangest, wildest, yet the brightest,
Was the joy that did not seem,
Cause with mounting dew and sunshine,
Faded ere 'twas fairly noon.
Wakened now, I start and wonder;
Withered leaves around me spread;
Cherished idols, broken, shattered,
Buds and flowers, down or dead!

Miscellaneous Items.
Twenty churches in New York use the revised version of the New Testament.
There is one town in Connecticut that has no fear of the measles. It's Haddam.
"Gracious, wife!" said a father, as he looked at his son William's torn trousers, "get that little Bill mended." And she replied, "So I will."
FOUNDED AT LAST.—A boot and shoe shop hangs out the sign "Cash on hand." Thank you, sir, it does, but we don't want any boots made of it.
IT CAME AT LAST.—Old Deacon Dobson always boasted that he was "prepared for the worst," and his neighbors thought he got it when he married his second wife.
The London Quarterly Review has a criticism of the new version of the New Testament, which charges that it is full of errors and not near so accurate as the old version.
A woman just married, wishing to impress her husband with her abilities as a housekeeper, bawled out to the servant, as he entered the door, "Matilda, bring me the wash-board; I want to wash the potatoes for the dinner."
"Topsy," said a mother to her seven-year-old boy, "you must not interrupt me when I am talking with ladies. You must wait till we stop, and then you can talk."
"But you never stop," retorted the boy.
"Play Mr. Levee," asked a lady, "what is a periphrasis?" "Madam, it is simply a circumlocution and pleonastic cycle of oratorical verbosity, obscuring an atom of identity lost in verbal prolixity."
A clergyman in Scotland preached, a few Sundays ago, from the text, "If ye do not repent, ye shall likewise perish." The wife of a farmer, who was present, went home and told her husband that the text was, "If you don't pay rent, you shall likewise perish."
"O, yes," said Mrs. Brown, as she surveyed with evident pleasure her new parlor sideboard, covered with China, and decorated with highly-colored tiles, "Mr. B. remarked last night that I was becoming quite an artist." And the old lady's countenance fairly beamed with delight as her eyes rested on a sixteen-cent Japanese teapot.
Why do the French eat less than any other nation? Because one egg is always an œuf for them.
The strongest man living—the man who moves the house by his tears.—How about the farmer who moved a cord of wood by his steers?
CHARLES Augustus was on his knees to his girl, telling in poetry, and prose, and melody, and song, how much he loved her, and what she should do to him, when he choked up and stopped. "Ah," she remarked in a pitying voice, "I think dear Charles Augustus, that you are too fool for utterance."

We have heard of "ostrich farming," but we never have thought of ostrich cultivation. We notice from an exchange that in some of the Southern States alligator farming is being carried on somewhat extensively. The demand for alligator leather in Europe has given to the industry a great impetus, and many thousands of skins have already been exported. Estwise the professional vocation of tending the gentle cayman was confined to ten or twelve persons, who were laughed at, and their plans despised by outside persons. Now hundreds are engaged in the work, and are reaping large profits.
When I was a young man, I was always in a hurry to hold the big end of the log, and to all the lifting, now I am older, I seize hold of the small end and do all the grunting.
A couple of lawyers engaged in a case were recently discussing the issue. "At all events," said the younger and more enthusiastic, "we have justice on our side." To which the older and wiser replied, "Quite true; but what we want is the Chief Justice on our side."
The great catalogue of printed books which the authorities of the British Museum propose to issue with the sale of the volumes a year—will issue with the Government grant will permit—take forty years to complete. The catalogue will comprise about 3,000,000 of titles, and the estimate for the issue of the catalogue will be $70,000. A single copy of the catalogue when completed will cost subscribers $200.
LITERARY NOTE.—A. D. F. Randolph & Co. have published an autobiographical sketch entitled "Life in Hawaii," by the Rev. H. H. Cress. Besides the story of the author's labors for a thirty-five years (1855-1880) in his own field, chapters 13 and 14 describe his visits to the canonical Marquesas, and other chapters contain graphic descriptions of the Hawaiian volcanoes, and their great eruptions. The book is a record of an unusually varied and successful life work.
HERMIT CRABS.—The "hermit crabs," so named in a case of shell for its "hab," are decidedly queer crabs in many aspects of their existence. Morally and mentally, so to speak, they are erratic. They are much given to quarrelsome encounters, and are ferocious and vindictive enough, as may be seen when two hermit crabs happen to light upon the same morsel of food. Then comes the tug of war, the stronger combat may only be terminated by the stronger dragging off not merely the morsel but the body of the vanquished along with it, the victor having pulled his tenuous rival out of his shell in the process. Hermit crabs adhere to the shell by means of a webbed superior tail to the crab. This tail, however, is soft and unprotected, so Pagurus, as the hermit is named, slips his appendage and body into the case of shell and is held in place by the webbed tail. Hermit crabs are found in all parts of the world, but are particularly numerous in the tropics, and are especially common in the Hawaiian Islands. They are found in all parts of the world, but are particularly numerous in the tropics, and are especially common in the Hawaiian Islands. They are found in all parts of the world, but are particularly numerous in the tropics, and are especially common in the Hawaiian Islands.
