

ADAIR ADVICES.

ADAIR, June 23, 1891.

Harvest.
Green peas.
And other garden stuff.
The dogs are having an epidemic of distemper.
Will Clark has purchased a new gang plow.
T. S. Howe has bought a new McCormick self binder.
A mare belonging to Chris. Hook died Sunday morning.
Sam. Baird was to go to Hays City on Monday after a header.
Miss Mary Clark is attending a private school in Ellis.
Two men from the west are to help this community harvest.
The Fourth of July will be celebrated in the usual way.
L. U. Natic has gone east for his health. He wrote this and skipped.
H. M. Hallock had a niece visiting him part of last week. She was from Larned.

Cyrus and Hlva Harris have gone to Rice county for harvest and threshing work.
Our farmers made a combination last Saturday and bought nearly a ton of binding twine.
Hiram Griffith is to run a header for D. S. Clodfelter, of Ellis. Hiram is an expert at this business.
The interest in the Sunday school seemed for a while to have abated, but we are pleased to note an improvement.
It is claimed that the worm in some of the wheat has got to the head and the harvest has been thereby hastened.

Will Webster, W. A. Eppler, Jos. Runyon, A. S. Hughes, Joshua Musgrave, Sam. Baird, and one or two others were disappointed in getting the self binding harvesters they had ordered.
Sam Bradley is to work up here for two or three weeks with a pitch fork. Whoever works with him are apt to enjoy themselves.
If we were a regular correspondent we would have mentioned two weeks ago that Chester Mason was back from Canon City, where he has been the past winter.

Lue Howe has contracted to work for Sam. Baird during harvest. It may be that Mrs. Baird's cook—that is to be—had something to do with deciding him to accept this engagement.

It was rumored that F. P. Clark had bought an interest in a header. We guess the old dame was mistaken for once, although it was credited because "Doc." is an old hand and this would have given him another opportunity to "straddle the rudder." Experts assure us that this is no sinecure but it would probably have been as pleasant for him as it was last year to have Sam. Bradley shove thistles up his pants leg.

Tom. Robbins sports a new covered carriage and the smile on Mary Clark's face has to be seen to be appreciated. We crawled on behind that rig the other day and listened. "If I were a man," Mary was saying, "I would have applied for the job that Hiram has. But then," she added reflectively, "if I were a man I would have no such reason for wishing it." Just then Tommy let his enthusiasm get the better of him, and exclaimed: "No thank goodness, you are not a man. You are still a miss, but you won't be long. Not if I can help it, Mrs. Manly." Then there was some kind of a pop sound that made the horse jump and we fell off.

On the banks of the creek by John P. Marquand's there grows a willow tree. From what we can learn, the branches of this are a favorite resort of the daughter of the house when she is in a reflective mood and cares to think of—no matter what. It is but natural then, that when the girls call on her they should go down to the willow. Two weeks ago Sunday this was the case. But one of the girls, who we will call Eittam, because that is not her name (unless you spell it backwards) got too far out on the limb, for when she heard the boys coming she tried to leap to the shore, but alas! She miscalculated the distance and went down, down, down until her head was all that was not submerged. The boys heard the shrieks and rushed to the scene. In less time than it takes to write it, Wes. had uttered an agonized groan, threw off his hat and jumped to the rescue, kicking off his congress shoes as he went. In another moment he had landed the dripping young woman on terra firma, amidst the plaudits of the assembled, terror-stricken multitude. It was a deed of heroism and the young girl should reward the young man, by giving him the life he so unhesitatingly imperiled his own to save. We stand ready to write the notice.

WILD HORSE.

WILD HORSE, June 22, 1891.

Mrs. Emily Garrigues and her mother-in-law are visiting at Mr. C. Young's.

School closed in District 27 on Saturday of last week. We had a treat, an elaborate dinner, and a fine time.

Frank Upjohn has 35 acres of broom-corn, and Wm. Sweeney has 54 acres. Both have a good prospect for a bountiful harvest if they can destroy the weeds.

It is reported that wheat men are engaging help at $4 per day 75 or 100 miles south east from here, but we can work for $3 per day near home and clear as much as to go so far $4 per day.

L. F. Jones started to Missouri the 12th of this month. Mr. Jones is a fine man and a good neighbor and we were very sorry to part with him.

Most of the settlers were counting on going two or three days journey to find work through harvest. But the crops are looking so much better than had been expected that most of those who expected to go east have been employed within a days journey of home at $3. per day for man and team.
