

KANSAS NOTES.

(Kansas City Star.)

Even the newspapers which come in from Kansas are wet.

The Eldorado Republican is working up a mash on J. Ralph Burton.

Prof. Robert Hay has gone to Dakota. It is a poor year for irrigationists in Kansas.

Kansas has one doctor for every 300 people and could get on with half that number.

The Hutchinson News is booming Plumb for Presidency. Now, what is Easley after?

The sheriff of Miami county wants a few head of steers to mow the pasture in the court house park at Paola.

A jury in Sheridan county last week brought in a verdict for $3,000 against the Union Pacific railroad for the killing of a child.

Eight binders were at work in one wheat field in Butler county last week. It was nip and tuck between the machines and the showers.

The best corn crop ever raised in Kansas was planted in July. The farmers needn't be alarmed on account of the wetness so far as the corn is concerned.

Now is the time to die or at least to buy tombstones. A Hiawatha dealer advertises that he will sell monuments for the next sixty days at a discount of 33 1/2 per cent.

A female evangelist is preaching a kind of religion at Topeka that knocks people down and drags them out of their sins, so to speak. Of course, desperate cases require desperate remedies.

A Hutchinson justice of the peace has decided the dog ordinance unconstitutional. The case appealed. Owners of valuable dogs will make a test case, carrying the matter to the supreme court.

About two thousand men are engaged in harvesting wheat in Butler county. That throws the work of running the politics of the county almost entirely upon the shoulders of Bent, Murdock and Billy White.

Senator Plumb has written that he will surely be present at the meeting of Kansas editors at Clay Center on the 25th, but Del. Valentine says that the senator will talk about newspapers and will give politics a wide berth.

A Kansas editor has discovered that ten per cent of the 2,700 counties in the United States are named for Presidents. In Kansas there are seven counties which bear the names of Presidents; namely, Garfield, Grant, Jackson, Jefferson, Johnson, Lincoln, and Washington.

A clever, little woman in Wichita is the happy possessor of a new black silk which she earned in a most peculiar way. Every time her husband bought twenty-five cents worth of cigars she laid a like amount away in a drawer. In less than nine months she had enough to buy the silk and pay for the making and trimmings.

A Burlington hired girl served notice upon her present employer last week that she would quit and go home the first of July. Asked for her reason, she said it would be too warm to work during the summer, and in reply to the further query if she would not be required to work at home, she said: "Oh, no; mother does the work and we girls just sit around in the shade."

Nobody Got It.

The following rather curious piece of composition was recently placed upon the blackboard at a teachers institute and a Websters Dictionary offered to anyone who could read it and pronounce every word correctly. The book was not carried off, however as twelve was the lowest number of mistakes made in pronunciation: "A sacrilegious son of Belial who has suffered from bronchitis, having exhausted his finances, in order to make good the deficit, resolved to ally himself to a comely maiden of the Malay or Caucasian race. He accordingly purchased a calliope and coral necklace of chameleon hue; and, securing a suite of rooms at a principal hotel, he engaged the head waiter as his co-adjutor. He then dispatched a letter of the most unexceptional caligraphy, extant, inviting the young lady to a matinee. She revolted at the idea, refused to consider herself sacrificible to his desire, and sent a polite note of refusal; on receiving which he procured a carbine and a bowie-knife, said that he would not now forget letters hymeneal with the Queen, went to an isolated spot, severed his jugular vein and discharged the contents of his carbine into his abdomen. The debris were removed by the coroner."
