He'll Come Back

There is a general talk in the newspapers that the result of the recent election puts an end to Roosevelt as the supreme political power in this country. Such a theory is based on hopes or misunderstanding and will be found as fallacious as the one that the moon is made of green cheese.

The defeat in New York will turn out to be a good thing for Roosevelt. The people were getting tired of his winning all the time and doing every thing and everybody. The plain plug citizen came to the opinion that Roosevelt was getting too chesty and ought to be shown that he was not the entire performance. So when he had personally licked the Republican party of New York into submission and forced a candidate of his choosing on the party, the people mopped the earth with him just to prove that he did not own the planet.

If Stimson had won in New York this feeling of the people that Roosevelt is selfish and wants everything would have been kept in store for 1912. Now the people have shown to Mr. Roosevelt that they can smite him when he gets too gay and they will be much more apt to whoop it up for him and what he wants in 1912 than they would have been if he had run a riot of victory up to that time.

In the first place Roosevelt is the kind of a gent you can't keep down if you try. In the second place Roosevelt will now be a martyr and the martyr business pay in politics. And in the third place he has been punished and the licking need not be repeated.

So Roosevelt will "come back."—The Hutchinson News.

The Ten Cent Oleomargarine Tax

Why did the congress of the United States enact the present oleomargarine law which provides for an internal revenue tax of ten cents per pound on artificially colored oleomargarine? Was it to permit the butter producers of the country to exact a high price for butter as has been claimed? To make such a claim is a pretty serious indictment of our federal law making body.

Of course butter is higher in price than it was ten years ago but so are other necessities of life. The percentage of oleomargarine now being put upon the market bears a higher ratio to the amount of butter consumed than it did ten years ago. This coupled with the fact that less than three per cent of the oleomargarine sold is taxed at ten cents per pound proves that the oleomargarine law has absolutely nothing to do with the price of butter. Congress enacted this law to prevent fraud in the sale of oleomargarine. The law was never intended to prevent the honest sale of oleomargarine or to enhance the interests of the butter producers of the country, but rather to protect the one against fraud in the purchase of butter or oleomargarine and the other against fraudulent competition. Congress intended to compel the sale of oleomargarine in its natural color

(which is white or nearly so) instead of in the natural color of butter (which is yellow). Congress at the same time reduced the former tax of two cents per pound on oleomargarine to one-fourth of a cent per pound when the product is not artificially colored to look like butter.

Congress used its taxing power to prevent fraud in the sale of oleomargarine because it had no other effective means of accomplishing that result. When oleomargarine is put upon the market in its natural color, thus making it impossible to commit fraud, the tax is one and three-fourths cents less per pound than under any previous oleomargarine law.

The butter producers of the country are benefitted by oleomargarine legislation only in so far as the integrity of the dairy industry is sustained, a benefit which is shared by every other citizen. It is a most important branch of agriculture and it is quite as essential to prevent destruction of an agricultural industry by fraud as it is to prevent the destruction of our banking industry or any of the other industries in which every good citizen is interested.—The National Dairy Union.

A Beastly Crime

Glen Adams, a boy of 19, who was shucking corn for J. E. Huntington, a farmer living northwest of Morland, is in jail on a charge of shooting and killing Jos. Anderson, a bachelor whose home was six miles north and a mile east of Morland. The evidence seems to be that Adams took Huntingtons shot gun and three shells, all there were in the and walked about three miles to Anderson's home on election night about 10 o'clock. He first set fire to a straw stack near Anderson's house and then set the manure pile near Anderson's barn. Secreting himself in or behind the barn he waited for Anderson's appearance. He came out with a bucket of water and when near the fire Adams emptied a load of shot into his arm and shoulder. He dropped the bucket and started for the house. The murderer followed up and shot twice more, missing one and the other taking effect in the back. With the shells gone and Anderson not dead Adams fled. Joe managed to walk over to his brother Sam's who phoned for a physician and then went over and put out the fire. The sheriff was unable to do much until daylight when the tracks about the house were found leading away to the south. Following the trail which was broken in places but picked up again soon started a suspicion as to Adams. The tracks were followed to Huntington's and the boy was taken in charge. Mrs. Huntington said the boy was out until midnight and he says he was out fixing the fence. His tracks exactly corresponded with the trail and those about the scene of murder. Blood hounds were given the trail and followed it to Huntington's. The boy was accused last spring of burglarizing the house of D. C. Noland who lives near Huntington's and he was arrested. The trial came up but the county attorney failed to appear and prosecute and he was released. If he could escape prosecution for a bold burglary why should he feel much danger of he committed murder? The theory of the crime is robbery. Adams has been wanting to go home to his parents in Pennsylvania and felt that Joe might have money that he could get if he could get him out of the house and kill him. Anderson died at noon Wednesday.

The Grouch

My heart is heavy with its woe, there's so much wickedness below! I look around me and behold the pride and insolence of gold; and men pursuing pleasures cheap, which in the end will make them weep; why don't they let such baubles fire and be immaculate like me? And women gorgeous raiment wear, with shining doodads in their hair; they go to clubs and waste the hours—they should be sewing in their bowers; they should be spinning wool and flax, and bearing burdens on their backs; they glory in their tresses fine—their heads should be as bald as mine. I see young men indulge in games, with little clothing on their frames. They have a false and fatal pride because they're strong and sparkling-eyed, because their limbs are straight and fine—they ought to have bow legs like mine. Men go their errands, all in vain, upon the sea upon the plain, and all they hope and all they do, and all the phantoms they pursue, are idle as the toll of one who's throwing dornicks at the sun. Why work and sweat on land and sea? Why not sit hire and croak with me?—Walt Mason.

"No Hunting" and "No Fishing" signs are being plentifully sprinkled over farms at this season of the year. But near Parsons is a farmer who has them all beaten. In a conspicuous place he has posted this notice: "Hunt, fish and be d—d. If you get anything you will do better than I can."—Ex.

Out in Greeley county our old friend Frank Bollinger was elected sheriff, with a good round majority. In Lane county Ed Emerson was elected county clerk, and up in Trego, Chas. Bell managed to pluck the treasurership plump, W. N. Larrabee being re-elected to a third term as county clerk. We are pleased to note their success.—Utica Enterprise.

Mrs. Sam Garrigues sustained a painful injury yesterday afternoon by falling from the steps of the Citizens bank, striking her head on the cement pavement. The fall was caused by an attack of faintness just as she had ascended the steps. She spent a fairly comfortable night and was able to be taken home this morning.—Utica Enterprise.

A man not used to talking through the telephone thought all he had to do was to take down the receiver and talk to his daughter. When the Central answered, he said, "Is you my daughter?" She said, "No," and he said, "Go to hell." The hello girl told the manager about it and he went to see the old man and told him he would either have to apologize to the girl or have his phone taken out. Rather than have his phone removed he decided to apologize. He went to the phone and said to Central, "Be you the girl I told to go to hell 'Yesterday'?" She said, "Yes." The old man said, "Well you needn't go now.

Old Bill Shiftless has made a failure of everything he ever tackled in the way of business. He has even failed when he took a swing at religion. But Bill will argue by the hour that if the people would just elect him to the office he would make a howling success and save the country the first week he was in power. He has always howled that the success of the other fellows has kept him down. Bill has had a number of good jobs, but he failed to make good. When he got a good chance to put in a bill for services he always padded the account and tried to make his employers believe that five dollars worth of work was worth eighty. The people are getting mighty tired of Old Bill and his eternal howling and abuse of decent citizens, whom he hates because they will not lend him money and join him in his shiftless schemes. When Bill gets to a point where he can first reform himself a little along certain lines the people may decide to give him a chance at doing something for the public.—Osborne Farmer.

James Tague of Banner, Kans., thinks the experimental period in Western Kansas is past, and that from now on that part of the state will continue to develop more rapidly into a good farming country. When he landed in Trego county 25 years ago homesteads could be had, and he secured one. Since then he has been staying right with the country, and now he is the owner of 3,000 acres of land. "That part of the state has been settled and resettled a good many times during the last 25 years," said Mr. Tague. The booms would come and go, and people would come in, settle and in a short time pull up and leave so that we got a bad name out there, and the country itself was badly misrepresented. Every time any one left the country they gave it a bad name. But we are on a basis now where there is no danger whatever of going backward again. Each year now we find that land prices are just a little higher. No more homesteads can be had, and all the land is owned now by persons who are going to remain there. We have started to raising alfalfa and hogs, and carry on farming in the regular way. Wheat covers more acres than any other grain. In recent years wheat crops have been good, and prices high, which put farmers on their feet and added to land values. The acreage of wheat put in this fall is large, perhaps larger than last year. In places, however, the wheat has not got up, as it has been just a little too dry on the surface for it to grow. But a snow or rain will give it a start." Mr. Tague has been down to Excelsior Springs for three weeks and is now on his way home. He is one of the well-to-do stock farmers of Trego county. He handles a good deal of stock and also raises a large amount of wheat and other crops.—K. C. Drovers Telegram.

"Keep it out of the paper" is the cry which the local newspaper publisher daily hears. To oblige often costs considerable, though the party who makes the requests think the granting scarcely worth saying "thank you" for. A newspaper is a peculiar thing in the public's eye. The news-gatherer is stormed at because he gets hold one item and is abused because he does not get another. Young men, and often young women, as well as older persons, perform acts which become legitimate items for publication and then rush to the newspaper office and beg the editor not to notice their escapades. The next day they condemn the same paper for not having published another party doing the same thing they were guilty of, forgetting apparently their late visit to the printing office.—Newkirk Republican News Journal.
