D. R. Worley of Paradise, Kans., concludes that as long as the land area is not going to be enlarged, and as the country is becoming more densely populated, owners of farm lands here in the great agricultural district cannot do better than to hold their lands. "When I went to Kansas," said he, "it seemed as though that country was so large that it never would be settled. I have been there but thirty-five years, and it is all taken, and is being reduced to smaller farms each year. The changes of the past ten years show what is coming. Large farms are being cut into smaller tracts, the open range has disappeared, and we are down now to diversified farming. It is the great variety of crops that has made the Kansas farmer prosper. We occasionally have a poor year when land values will reach a stand still, but no longer are they declining in value. Strangers are going into that part of the state, and that simply shows that there are more people to come who have no land, and want it."—Russell Record.

An Western Kansas editor went into the newspaper business fifteen years ago with fifteen cents and today is worth $100,000. This remarkable success was due to his persistent hard work and natural newspaper adaptability and the further fact that a rich uncle died a few months ago leaving him $99,998. [This must be Deacon Walker of the Osborne Farmer.]

The boy stood on the burning deck and didn't squeal or holler, although the flames did scorch his neck and crimp his paper collar; they called to him: "Oh, we entreat—jump overboard—you ought'er!" Says he: "I'm used to awful heat, but don't know much of water;" and as his soul went up in smoke (Oh, wasn't that a pity!) He gurgled: "While I wait to croak I'll sing a little ditty," and what he said I can't repeat—'twas half a dozen stanzas—condensed it meant; "Who cares for heat; I spent last month in Kansas!"—Ex.

One of our friends, relates an exchange, in discussing the best story in the Bible, says: "It may surprise you, but its about Noah and the flood. We say this even in the face of educated folks, who turn up their noses and declare this story a fake. You remember Noah had to work a long time on the ark. It was uphill business, too, at best to go on toiling and sweating day after day in the hot sun building a boat way out on dry land while the local anvil and hammer club sat around spitting tobacco juice upon his lumber, whitening up his pine boards with their knives and telling him what a fool he was to be expecting a big rain in a country that was too hot to grow alfalfa. But he kept at it. Finally the flood came and every mother's son of the croakers drowned. This is the only instance we know of in either sacred or profane history where a bunch of knackers got what was exactly coming to them."—Ex.

HARD TIMES FOR DOCTORS

Their Fees Were Small in Babylon and Failure to Cure Meant Torture.

Babylonian surgeons four thousand years ago had not the easy time of their modern colleagues. The French archaeological commission has just discovered there a tablet containing some interesting facts about the Babylonian Bob Sawyer. For all operations "performed with a knife" patients were to pay twelve silver shekels, which is about $3.75 of American money. A broken leg or arm must be set for $2, and teeth were drawn at the uniform rate of seventy-five cents.

All the same, this must have been pretty good pay for the time, because the tablet in question goes on to enumerate the punishment meted out to surgeons who made professional mistakes. These would appeal even less to the modern medical man than the low fees.

When an operation caused the death of a patient the unfortunate surgeon had both his hands cut off; and when he did not cure his patient in reasonably quick time, the tablet tells us that his fee was confiscated by the government. It does not mention what was considered a reasonable time for healing.

WHY HE LINGERED.

Wise—Old Boozer has been hovering at death's door for nearly a week. Sharpe—Guess he can't find the key-hole.

More Natural Facilities.

"So you like the seashore better than the mountains?"

"No, indeed; I prefer the mountains."

"Then why are you going to the seashore?"

"Because it is easier there to get in to the swim."

He Had More.

The Old Gentleman—For heaven's sake, young man, point that gun the other way and be careful how you handle it. First thing you know it will go off.

The Young Hunter—Aw, dat's all right. I don't care if it does; I got plenty more cartridges.

Dust Disease.

Now that we have the "typhoid fly" and the "malarial mosquito," science may soon order that not a few of those who experience a blue Monday be described as sufferers from "dust depression." Good physicians assert that much of the mental and physical languor which many people of indoor life report on Monday is due to their tremendous intake of dust on the day before. This powder is full of physical peril. It may actually have those disease germs which set up systematic disturbances, the effects of which we commonly call colds; it may, by merely piling in dirt and filth, so irritate the mucous membrane as to do other serious harm. It is a troublemaker in any form.—Boston Herald.
