

not likely that despotic tactics of this kind will help Cleveland. There are thousands of Democrats who would vote for Thurman for President, notwithstanding his advanced age, who will not vote for him for Vice-president associated with Cleveland. The Democratic friends of Gray in the Indian State of Indiana will not be likely to ratify the Cleveland program, which was forced through the St. Louis convention at the expense of their own candidate.

A Departure in the Wrong Direction.
PHILADELPHIA, June 7.—The Ledger will say: "So far as the tariff declaration departs from the resolve of 1884, it is a departure in a wrong and risky direction. That tariff statement of 1884 was most carefully and considerably drawn. It is the one which most nearly expresses what is right and sound as to the traditional Democratic position on tariff matters. The indication of the convention in adopting, in addition to the platform, a resolution indorse the Mills bill abortion brings about a probability that some of the solid south might come out short by the defection of Virginia, West Virginia or North Carolina—one or other of them, and possibly all three."

One of the Best Ever Adopted.
NEW YORK, June 7.—The Herald will say: "It is as good a platform as ever adopted by a convention; clear, straightforward, without quibble or double-dealing. What it declares concerning promises redeemed is true; what it promises the ticket guarantees. Now let us see what the Republicans can do for us at Chicago. If they speak of the past, they must confess to pledges broken by them. If they speak of the future, this Democratic platform warns them to greater honesty than they have practiced in recent years."

An Enthusiastic Indorsement.
Washington Post, June 7.—"The Democratic platform is as good as Cleveland and Thurman. Well, let it be. Where is the Democrat who will not shout himself hoarse in support of the old Roman? His name will add thousands of votes to the ticket in Ohio, in Indiana, in Michigan, in California and in New York, but we cannot think that it will carry Ohio. Ohio is a Republican State."

"But what a strange combination it is. Cleveland and Thurman! That grand old man of Democracy, the statesman tried and true, gives place to the man of destiny and rides behind. He is necessary now. Too old in 1883 to be secretary of State, too weak and infirm in 1885 to either Associate Justice or Chief Justice of the Supreme Court he is still strong enough in 1888 to run the canvass of a presidential campaign, and quite young enough to be inaugurated Vice-president in 1889."

President Cleveland and Mayor Hewitt.
BUFFALO, June 7.—The News last evening prints a letter from George B. Ketcham, an insurance agent of the Metropolitan who used to live in Buffalo, and is well known here. It reads:

"My Dear Mr. Butler:
The enclosed conversation was had on the 31st with Mayor Hewitt, and has as yet not been reported here. Please hold it until you can print it as you wish to follow it up. It is sent you as you may have it in hand and ready. Hope to see you or Amb in St. Louis Tuesday."

The conversation enclosed is as follows:
"Mr. Mayor, you drew up the tariff plan in the platform of the Democratic convention of 1884?"
"Yes, I did."
"Have you prepared a tariff plan for the St. Louis convention?"
"I have not prepared anything for that convention, and I shall do nothing about it, nor about the caucus."
"As a Democrat, will you not do all you can for Mr. Cleveland's election and be re-nominated?"
"No, I shall not vote for him."
"For what vote, Mr. Mayor?"
"Because he is no statesman and I do not believe in his reelection."
"Don't you think Mr. Cleveland will be re-elected?"
"He may, but not by me."
"This conversation was had with Mayor Hewitt in the presence of several New York city reporters and was not noticed by Cleveland, which, perhaps, indicates his influence with them."

Telegraphic Brevities.
Henry George comes out strong in this week's Standard for Cleveland and tariff reform, and devotes a four-column editorial to showing why the people should support the ticket nominated at St. Louis.

In response to the Pittsburg Conkling Club, which expressed its preference for Gresham for President, the Judge has written a letter thanking them, and saying he will not be disappointed at whatever action the Chicago convention may take.

Deputy Sheriff Alford, of Cochise county, Arizona, on Wednesday night had a fight with three Sonora train robbers, in the Wheatstone mountains, sixty miles north of Nogales. The officer succeeded in killing two and mortally wounding the other.

Mors of the Blas.
Des Moines Register.
The Associated Press took great pains the other day to announce that Robert G. Ingersoll was to present Gresham's name to the Chicago convention in the most brilliant complimentary speech ever heard. Inquiry of Colonel Ingersoll himself reveals the fact that he had no such intention, had not authorized the announcement and moreover was not to be a member of the convention.

A Trifle Houdly.
Springfield Republican.
The original Gresham boomer would seem to have been a woman, if what the Chicago Tribune says is true. It fishes up a "worldly old lady living in Indiana" who asserts that while Gresham was a new-born babe she said to his mother, "He's a fine boy, Mrs. Gresham, and may be President, but I don't believe in a singular manliness about this anecdote, but why?"

Now What Does This Mean?
St. Louis Post-Dispatch (Dem.).
Democrats will cavil on the ninth part of a hair in making a platform, but they are too wise and too "practical" to look a gift horse in the mouth. They can unite very promptly on a Democratic candidate whose hands open and close the patronage spigot.

When the Cat Was Away.
Philadelphia Times.
The gentlemen at St. Louis who are going to carry the Pacific States for Cleveland and Thurman ought to have been at home in Oregon on election day. They were evidently missed.

It Does So.
St. Louis Post-Dispatch (Dem.).
It seems to be much easier for a Democratic convention to unite on a President in office than to agree upon a platform of principles.

A Wise Conclusion.
Philadelphia Times.
Upon the whole, it will be better for the Democrats not to count too much upon Oregon this time.

Political Omen.
Following the editor of the Indianapolis Journal.
Having been a close observer of political events for a number of years, and being a believer in OMEGA, herewith I send you one that is clear to my mind, in the triumphant success of the Republican party. Its abundant crop of popular blossoms and the largeness of the same. The blossoms bloom as it killed by our late foe. The riparian remains a beautiful and beautiful. The riparian is a sure sign of the Republican election of the Republican ticket, as such a crop has not been since the election of Abraham Lincoln until the present time. The nickery failed that year same as now. Please give this space for the benefit of your readers.

LAFAYETTE, June 7.—Edward McKinister, aged eighteen, residing south of this place, was shot by his older brother, William, about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and died about 11 o'clock last night. Both young men bore good reputations. They were quarrelling, William accusing his brother of removing taps from his buggy wheels. The shooting occurred in the yard of their home. The fratricide is prostrated with remorse. The whole trouble was the result of hasty temper and a senseless habit of carrying fire-arms.

Horse-Thieves and Burglars Operating in Marshall and Vicinity.
Special to the Indianapolis Journal.
MARSHALL, June 7.—Horse-thieves and burglars are becoming alarmingly numerous in this region again. Last night Judson Stage's house was entered and his watch, some clothing and a small sum of money secured. Several other houses were attempted, but unsuccessfully.

Cardinal Mazzofanti, the linguist, who is said to have known a hundred languages, declared that he never forgot a word he had once learned.
An English clergyman mentions a man who could remember the day of the burial of every person who had died in the parish during thirty-five years, and could repeat the name and age of each deceased person and the names of the mourners at his funeral. He was asked if he intellectually that he could not be trusted to feed himself.

To a friend who congratulated Leyden on his remarkable memory, he replied that he had found it a source of great inconvenience. On the friend expressing surprise he explained that he had often wished to recollect a particular expression in something he had read, but could not do it until he had repeated the whole passage from the beginning to the expression he desired to recall.

At Hillsboro, Tuesday night, Colonel Ben E. Johnson, proprietor of the Montgomery News, died at his residence, aged sixty-five.
At Rockton, Wednesday morning, Erastus S. Bates, who had been looking after his stock, was found dead in a field, leaning against a tree. He had a wound in the neck, and a pistol ball was found in his chest. He was a well-known citizen, and was a member of the local militia.

Mrs. John C. Southwick, of Waukegan, was found dead in her bed Wednesday morning. She was in the house alone, and had no attending nurse. She was about sixty years of age, and a wife of John C. Southwick, of Arlington, D. T. A coroner's jury rendered a verdict of death from heart disease.

William Heller, alias Weiner, a prisoner in the Joliet penitentiary, was sent on an errand by his keeper last Tuesday and failed to return. After a diligent six days search Deputy-warden Albert Garvin found him secreted between two ices houses. Heller had secured a forty-foot pole to aid him in scaling the walls.

A ROYAL ROAD TO KNOWLEDGE.
It is to be used by Clever Society Women—They Appear to Better Advantage Than the Men.
New York Mail and Express.
The question whether or not the men or the women who move in good society are the better educated is discussed casually from year to year, and has always elicited a good deal of interesting information, and has been attested in the discussion of it by the submission of a sum of money to the State of New York, which is usually made by the greater amount of knowledge and cultivation is to be found among the representatives of the gentler sex. Naturally the women of the present time claim that they are supported by their own arguments and the success of admirers and champions of the sex who consider themselves well advised that they are not particularly interested in any determination of the question. The younger man of society is commonly described, and perhaps not entirely without reason as a sort of American Captain Crawley, big, rowdy, and simple and thoroughly ignorant of everything pertaining to literature, the arts or politics, but well up in sporting matters, and especially in the breeding of famous dogs, and thoroughly competent to analyze and criticize a pugilistic encounter from a strictly scientific point of view. These who take this position in the matter triumphantly refer to the fact that foreigners who come to America and who visit the larger cities through the country usually get leave to go hunting, and unfortunately they are pointed out at the former, exclaiming: "You can eat that crow or die." There being no escape the hunter got through with part of his game, and the latter, in the meantime, exclaiming: "You've done pretty well; here take your gun and get off right smart. The soldier, as soon as he got the piece in his hands, immediately struck the tables by leveling it at the planter, exclaiming: "Now you see the rat of that crow or I'll shoot you on the spot." There being no escape the hunter got through with part of his game, and the latter, in the meantime, exclaiming: "You've done pretty well; here take your gun and get off right smart. The soldier, as soon as he got the piece in his hands, immediately struck the tables by leveling it at the planter, exclaiming: "Now you see the rat of that crow or I'll shoot you on the spot."
