THE RAILWAY TELEGRAPHISTS.

Men Upon Whose Accuracy and Skill Depends the Safe Movement of Trains.

The third annual session of the National Association of Railway Telegraphists, which began in Indianapolis this morning, will be a meeting of considerable importance. The association has had a wonderful growth since its organization in 1885. Less than one hundred gentlemen attended that meeting, but soon afterward operators all over the country began to send in their names, and the convention of 1886 met there were over five hundred names on the roll. Since that time there has been a constant increase, and the association now has nearly 13,000 members, scattered over the whole of North America. It is founded on conservative principles and, unlike some labor organizations, does not aim to antagonize those who give the members employment. "We have three objects," said one of the members last night. "One is to cultivate a fraternal feeling, another is to improve the grade of operators, and the third is to give an improved service to the railway companies." Over two-thirds of the members are employed on the lines of railroads. The chief officers are grand chief telegrapher, A. D. Thurston; assistant grand chief telegrapher, C. J. Comb.

The leading matters of the association will be at the New Deacon House. Over sixty members were registered at the hotel last night, and many more are expected to arrive on the early morning train. It is thought that the attendance will prevent the attendance being as large as it was at the last annual meeting, but not less than 200 delegates are expected. Those who came in last evening were all young men, and a very jovial set of fellows they are. Quite a number are accompanied by their wives. This afternoon the delegates will have a parade, which will start from the New Deacon at 3 o'clock. It will be marshaled by T. M. Pierson. It will be headed by a band, attended by carriers containing Governor Gray, Grand Chief Telegrapher A. D. Thurston, Rev. O. C. McCulloch, Rev. M. L. Haines and others. The line of march will be south to Washington street, west to Tennessee, north to Ohio, east to Meridian, north to Vermont, east to Alabama, south to Washington, and then by the way of Delaware street to Tomlinson Hall. At the hall addresses of welcome will be delivered by the Governor on behalf of the State, W. P. McAllister on behalf of the Indiana telegraphers, and responses by Past Chief Telegrapher Hon. Geo. E. Sellers, of Cleveland, O., A. D. Thurston and J. Comb. The routine sessions will not begin until Thursday, and will be held in the Odd-fellows Hall on Virginia avenue. The convention will probably be in session all week.

A Veteran's Astonishment.

Will Nash is one of the veterans. He marched with Sherman to the sea, and was in the front of all the battles with his regiment—the Fifty-fourth Indiana. Will was the man who single-handedly captured eleven rebels at the battle of Mission Ridge and brought them into camp. He visited the cyclorama of the Battle of Atlanta the other day, getting his first glimpse of the great painting from the rear. "Huh!" said he, "I don't see nothing there like any battle of Atlanta I was ever in," and as his gaze ranged slowly round to the north he gave vent to expressions of dissatisfaction and dissent until his eye caught the railroad. "Hullo, that's the railroad and that cut. I mist that. And that's the brick house—yes, and that's Greth's battery—'bosh we recaptured that—'an' that's where we came in, over there 'twix the Peach Creek cut. That was a hot fight, I tell you. For the next fifteen or twenty minutes he did all the talking, while Captain Barney, the regular lecturer, stood quietly by taking in the scene. "Looks just exactly like it happened. Seems as if it was right 'thar this minute," said Nash, and, as he went down and out after an hour's visit, he remarked, "If the finest thing I ever laid my eyes on. Carried me back twenty-four years like a charm. Wouldn't have missed it for a five-dollar bill."

Married Under an Old License.

Miss G. McLean, white county clerk, on June 18, 1888, issued a marriage license to David C. Rankin and Olive S. Lowe. No return was ever made on the license until yesterday, and inquiry revealed the fact that the contracting parties were married Monday night by Squire Judkins. It had been exactly three years since the license was issued. Mr. Rankin told the Squire that he and his betrothed had arranged to marry the day after the license was obtained, but some unforeseen circumstances caused the ceremony to be postponed.

Building Permits.

The following building permits were issued yesterday: Henry Drake, frame cottage, on Tennessee street, near Ray, $550; Pat Brennan, improvements to store-room on Patterson street, near Michigan, $25; Daniel Borkdorf, frame dwelling at No. 678 West Washington street, $250; A. B. Condit, improvements at 186 North Delaware street, $500; C. Schaefer, frame dwelling on Butler street, near Park avenue, $1,500; John Wolfe, improvements at No. 325 South Pennsylvania street, $100.

Woman's Department.

The executive committee of the woman's department at the State fair met in the agricultural rooms at the State house yesterday to look after the interest of that department at the coming fair. The president is Mrs. A. M. Noy, vice-president, Miss Mary R. Herron, and secretary, Mrs. H. L. Seward. The work of this department is rapidly becoming one of the most interesting features of the State fair.

Must Take Down Signs.

In accordance with the action of the Council, Assistant City Attorney Smith yesterday served notice on all storekeepers on Washington street who have signs projecting over the sidewalk that they must immediately remove them. If the order is not obeyed, steps will be taken to enforce the ordinance.

THE FINAL CHOICE

In his great speech in Chicago, in 1880, Garfield said: Not in Chicago in the heat of June, but in the sober quiet which comes to them between now and November will this great question be settled.

So it is in everything. Not what is meritorious and may catch the eye now in June will decide the great question for you—"where is the best place to buy," but the satisfaction you will get out of it between this and November. The goods you buy of us we endeavor to suit to your continuing daily wants, so that the wall paper, for instance, which you get now will please you in the cool days of the fall just as well as in these bright, warm days of the summer. We endeavor to look out for the continuing confidence of our friends by pointing them to the best goods. Only experts in all departments of
