

VETERAN VOTERS OF FORTY.

They Call on Gen. Harrison with Formal Congratulations and Resolutions. A Reception Given the Tippecanoe Club, Several of Whose Members Expect to Cast Their Last Vote for a Harrison.

Tide of Popular Opinion More and More Favors the Republican Nominations.

Assurances Come from Everywhere that the Party Was Never More in Harmony—Gov. Foster on the Coming Campaign.

AN IMPRESSIVE SCENE.

The Tippecanoe Club Formally Congratulated General Harrison. The most impressive scene that has been enacted at General Harrison's home was that yesterday afternoon, when the Tippecanoe Club called to congratulate him upon his nomination.

INTERVIEWS AND INCIDENTS.

The People in All Sections Respond Readily to the Acts of the Convention. Ex-Governor Charles Foster, of Ohio, during his stay in the city yesterday, was driven to several points of interest.

On each member was pinned a silk badge having on it the same inscription as the banner, except that the year "1880" after the words "veteran voters" was changed to 1888.

When everything was ready for the club to march the band began to play down, and several members asked "What will we do?"

"What do you mean?" asked the response from a chorus of voices. "I go, as I have been through too many torments to slip a like this to interfere with our own visit."

"I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers. Now if there is anything an Irishman should do, it is what an Englishman would do."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

"What do you think of the outlook in New York?" "I regard it as highly favorable. I was there in 1860, and I know that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland and his policy by the London papers."

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

I think you recollect, and perhaps, it was that as much as the night club that drew me to the Whig candidate for the presidency, that he came out of Virginia to the West with no fortune but the sword he bore, and unheeded was in the hands of the Whigs. He transmitted little to his descendants but the respect he had won from his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that the Whig party has been doing else to our children. He and his wife and his children, I think, are the ones of "That's enough." My friends, I am a thorough believer in the American test of character, [cries of "That's right"] the rule must be applied to make a man's life worth anything is taken. He will not build high who does not build for himself. [Applause and cries of "That's right"] I believe also in the American opportunity which puts the starry sky above every boy's head, and sets his foot upon a ladder which he may climb until his strength gives out.

ing to enter the canvass in earnest when he returns from Europe, and he is a power in the politics of New York when he tries. Mr. Blaine will also take a part in the campaign, and his presence there will be worth the army votes. Mr. Morton is so very popular, and with the conservative, thoughtful business men of the State has great strength. Looking the whole situation over in our minds, we are confident that we have secured confidence in our ability to make our State entirely Republican in November.

Mr. Wheeler was acquainted with General Harrison in 1840, and remembers him in the fight at Resaca. The two both in the same army corps—the Twentieth—though in different divisions. Under the circumstances he has formed an additional friendship for General Harrison.

W. A. Van Buren returned from an extended trip through the East yesterday. He attended commencement at Yale college, and afterward visited Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other Eastern cities. The people of Indianapolis, he says, have no conception of how enthusiastic the Eastern people are over the nomination of Harrison and Morton.

"The people everywhere," said he, "look upon the action of the Convention as a permanently right and strong one, and I believe that we have a chance to observe how the nomination was received, and I say candidly I never saw such enthusiasm. I heard thousands of men who were with them in the Convention, and I did not hear a single man raise an objection to the ticket. I was in Philadelphia when the nomination was made. I had been in Chicago and had seen the nomination in a newspaper office just after the nomination was made and found several thousand people absolutely wild. The man who was posting bulletins saw me and came out and asked me if I had been to Chicago. I said I had and he then asked me if I was an Indian. I said I was, and that the battle was a game played by thousands of others that Indiana Harrison Republicans were at the convention. He snatched it off my coat and posted it in the window along with a notice reading 'Europe the ten thousand' and was followed by Indians who went to Chicago for General Harrison." The people seemed crazy to see an Indian, and they crowded around me until I almost felt as if I were being crushed. In every body regards it as the strongest ticket the Republicans have nominated for years, and the same is true of New York. In fact, you can find a Republican in the East who does not predict the election of Harrison and Morton.

Gates Barnett, of Boston, and J. M. Barnett, of Albany, N. Y., passed through the city en route to St. Louis, yesterday, and stopped off long enough to attend the notification ceremonies. They are business men, and say that in business circles in the communities where they live, there is a decided movement towards the Republican party. Mr. J. M. Barnett states that in Albany, N. Y., in the one block where he does business, fourteen Democrats have signed their intention to vote for the Republican ticket. The rebellion against the President's policy, they think, is universal among business men and will result in a decided defeat in all the doubtful States in the East.

Dr. W. C. Banta, of Martinsville, chairman of the Republican county central committee of Morgan county, states that he will establish fourteen Lincoln leagues during the coming year. The county is now in a state of excitement. The Republicans believe they can carry Morgan this year by between four hundred and five hundred majority. General Harrison is very popular there, and it is expected that in nearly every campaign of recent years. His candidacy will be considered by the Morgan county Republicans as something that touches them personally, and there will be no lack of energy or unanimity.

Hon. L. M. Campbell, of Danville, says that the outlook in Hendricks county is good. The Republicans there are thinking of making the choice of Harrison and Morton unanimous. The Democrats are not enthusiastic. If the county were divided into two, the Republicans would be in a majority. The fact that they do not want the party organization to go down, he doubts whether any effort at all would be made by them this fall.

Gen. George Reeder represents Pennsylvania on the committee on notification. He says that 100,000 majority will be against the President's message and the President's policy in his State in November. He confidently believes that the vote will be in that way the next year, and says the general outlook for Harrison and Morton, so far as he is able to hear, is highly gratifying.

J. H. McNeely, of the Evansville Journal, brings encouraging reports from his part of the State. Although there were a number of staunch supporters of General Greaham down there, they are Republicans always, and consequently are falling into line with victor. The general outlook is very bright, and he says, in fine order and will make a vigorous campaign this year.

An Act the Men Will Not Forget. A circumstance illustrative of the character of General Harrison occurred when the residence, now occupied by him, was in the course of erection. A number of workmen were employed by the contractor, who was paid for the entire work. Everything went on smoothly until, about a month before the completion of the residence, when the contractor disappeared from the city, indebted to his men for their wages. When the work was completed, the General took the entire party, which contained a number of free traders and other men, and stipulated wages of each, although he had once given the money to the contractor. The circumstance is recollected by several workmen, and it is a fact that has been talked of for many years.

A Badge of an Old Campaigner. Mrs. Governor Cheney wore a rare badge at General Harrison's yesterday. It is one owned by her father, who lived in Lowell, Mass., in 1840. It is made of satin and is about eight inches long. At the top is a picture of Gen. William Henry Harrison, with his signature under it, and the following comment beneath: "The frequent change of rulers is the soul of Republicanism." The badge, of one white satin, is somewhat faded now, but has been mounted anew by Mrs. Cheney.

A Little One's Congratulations. Every mail continues to bring General Harrison many letters from all parts of the country. All are of the same encouraging character. Among the telegrams received yesterday was the following: MAPLETON, Dak., July 4. Hon. Ben Harrison: I send congratulations. Liked to do so. HARRISON G. CROCKER.

Notable Acquisitions in Floyd. The following is an extract from a letter received by Attorney General Michener from M. H. Urdy, of New Albany: "I have just received from you a fact that State Senator John S. Day, of Floyd county, has declared that he is for Harrison and protection; that Alex. Webster, who has always