A LECTURE ON PARIS.

Mr. Jacobs Pleases Young and Old with Good Description and Many Pictures.

The pleasant hall of the High-school was well-filled, last night, by an audience which contained a good many juveniles, as well as elders, assembled to listen to C. P. Jacobs's illustrated lecture on "Paris." Prof. W. W. Grant announced that the next lecture would be given Friday evening, 30th inst., by Hon. A. C. Harris on "Rome," and introduced Mr. Jacobs, who went to work vigorously with the aid of a fine stereopticon to illustrate and explain ancient and modern Paris. Mr. Jacobs has all the essentials for an entertaining lecture on any portion of the globe he has visited. His historical information is large and accurate, he is a close observer and his descriptive powers are admirable. In deference to his younger hearers he devoted considerable time last evening to matters upon which he would have probably touched more lightly if his hearers had been made up entirely of older people, but every part of his address was attractive and had all the charm which attaches to an interesting personal experience well told. The illustrations were full and complete. Beginning with the bird's-eye view of Paris, in which all the topography and most of the prominent buildings of the city were shown, he followed this with scenes in which most of its celebrated localities were seen in detail, and when the hour's lecture closed with an exhibition of portraits of distinguished modern Frenchmen and clever descriptions of each, the audience was inclined to regret that it had not lasted longer.

THE NATURAL GAS SUPPLY

Demand Must Control This Resource of Fuel as It Does Everything Else.

When It Increases More Wells Must Be Put on to Meet It, Otherwise Consumers Will Have to Lessen Use of the Gas.

The announcement of the Consumers' Trust Company that it desires to make no more contracts for supplying gas until all those accepted by the board of directors have been fulfilled, has, at the first pull of frosty weather in the natural gas supply, caused considerable speculation as to what will happen when the thermometer goes below zero. "The people," said a citizen yesterday, who has given this matter much study, will shortly awaken to the fact that a generous Providence is not dealing out a fuel that will come by merely tapping the earth. It was not so long ago that we were told of the happy period to come when all one need do to keep warm was to ask for natural gas and he would get it at such a low price that it would astonish him. Every man was to enjoy throughout the winter, no matter how low the thermometer stood, a uniform, balmy and inexpensive summer's warmth. After while this blissful condition was to be realized without any cost whatever. Manufacturers would pour in and push and jostle each other in their eagerness to get the bounty of heaven. The action on the part of the natural gas companies in withholding their resources is suggestive that at least one-half the people of Indianapolis will continue to burn coal through this winter.

"Was not that apparent months ago to those who had studied the gas problem?" he was asked. "Certainly," but theorists and business men with good intentions argued otherwise. They promised that by fall twenty thousand consumers could be supplied by one company alone, so extensive were the preparations it had made for the service, but now, before cold weather has really begun, we find all companies tightening their resources and coming down to real business methods. There is a wide difference between promoting and conducting an enterprise, and particularly one that deals with natural gas.

"In supplying gas what is the first thing to be considered?" "Sufficient resources; and after that the fact that a consumer calls for double the amount of gas when the thermometer is at zero than when it is thirty-two degrees above. Wells that keep the people comfortably warmed in the weather is only snappish will not keep them from discomfort when it is really cold. The gas in use will supply a certain number of consumers, but beyond that the output is in jeopardy every moment. The certain pressure falls the gas is getting away from the consumer, but so long as it increases the conditions are right. There is also a loss of gas as the supply may be, through friction. When the pressure is 100 pounds in the field and ninety at the reducing station, the figure one of the companies showed yesterday, it means a loss of 105 pounds. Ninety-three pounds will be sufficient to keep consumers to a certain number well supplied, but the moment twenty or more are brought in to get their share of gas with others at that pressure the limit will be lessened, unless there is an increase from the flow at the well."

"But if the flow at the well increases what?" "The pipes can bring no more than they can hold. If the wells fill the pipes there will be no room in them for the gas from even one more. It is the pressure at the field that is the starting point for regulating the supply. If 4,700 consumers cannot have their need of fuel properly met by the gas from twelve wells, then there is but one alternative--drill more wells and lay more mains. If the wells do not prove productive, then the company that is the consumer must limit its operations to the consumers it can supply. That is business, and transporting natural gas is nothing but business."

"Which now the wells are drilled, and more mains laid the supply will be limited?" "That is it. The whole city cannot be supplied with the wells now in operation in the Noblesville field, and we were a number of wells sufficient for that purpose flowing it would require five times as much trunk-line service to do it. In a word, some of the companies have undertaken more than five companies could accomplish this winter."

Mr. Boardman, of the Broad Ripple, when he was questioned yesterday as to there being a time in the calculations of his company as to its ability to supply a large number of consumers said that caused the whole trouble he and his associates are now experiencing in the summer. He said that he thought we had plenty of gas and took more contracts than we should have done. We had eighteen wells, nine of which were in operation, but we were found in this first breath of cold weather that more wells were needed. We could not supply all our customers with the resources we had, and of course some have quit and gone to other companies. The trouble is there is in it; but we are drilling more wells, and on that work have two sets of men. One well is expected to come in to-morrow morning and another on Monday. We will continue to drill until we have a sufficient supply."

Mr. Boardman would not admit that his field had failed. He said the company would continue its business on a limited number of consumers. When the reporter visited the Trust company's office, and while waiting to speak to Col. Lilly, the cashier of the Trust asked the keeper how many connections the company had made. The reply was 4,700, and the next minute the reporter was in conversation with Col. Lilly, who, in answer to a question as to why contracts were refused by the Trust, said: "We have so much office work to do that it is necessary to call a halt and find out where we are. This making 100 or 200 connections a day causes a large outlay of money, and it is time to think about retrenchment and economy."

"You, no doubt, have plenty of gas?" "We think so. We have sixteen wells and are not using all of them. We have twelve running and are developing our field."

"How many consumers have you?" "About 7,000."

The Trust also gives as a reason for stopping on contracts the requirement of the ordinance that no new connections shall be made after Dec. 1.

"There is plenty of gas in the Noblesville field, but the means of supplying it for this winter are sufficient to meet a certain demand and no more."

Annual Charity Meeting. The Indianapolis Benevolent Society will hold its fifty-third annual meeting at English's Opera-house Sunday evening Dec. 2, at 7:30 o'clock. It has been customary for the churches, so far as possible, to close their usual evening services and unite in this meeting. The pastors are invited to sit on the platform. All officers and members of charity societies are invited to be present, and be on the platform. General Harrison will preside, and short addresses will be given on "What Makes Bad Boys," "The Need of a State Board of Charities," "The Need of a State Reformatory for First Offenders," and "Social Degradation, or the Need of Charity Organizations."

Johnson Re-marrys Mrs. Alexander. Jesse Johnson and his former wife, Mrs. A. M. Alexander, were remarried in St. Louis recently. It was generally supposed when Mrs. Alexander procured a divorce from her husband she did so with the intention of remarrying Mr. Johnson. The couple will make Florida their future home.

contrary to the laws of New York in which it was chartered, and the laws of other States in which it does business. The effect of the decision in Ohio is regarded by the Commissioner of Insurance of that State as being in the favor of the company, and Auditor Carr will be guided by it here until further advised.

CALLERS AND PRESENTS.

Response of the President-Elect to Congratulations of the Tippecanoe Club. General Harrison's visitors began to pay their respects early yesterday, half a dozen calling at 7:30 A. M., before he had breakfasted. He had been up some little time however, and received the party. The fact that the General has set aside the hours from 2 to 4 every afternoon to receive his friends seems to have been overlooked by a considerable number. Among the prominent visitors yesterday were Congressman Houk, of Tennessee; Governor-elect Hovey, Chairman James N. Huston, Wm. H. Woods, of New York, and Charles H. Crap and son, of Philadelphia, the well-known shipbuilder. A bride couple on their wedding tour were among the callers in the afternoon, and the groom blushing informed the General that they had been recently married and asked for an autograph which was given with cordial congratulations. The live eagle from Southport, N. B., sent by Mrs. Wanamaker, of that place, arrived in a large box and was carried into the residence. It was not yet determined, but it will probably be sent down to the New Denison Hotel in the rear of which is a large and commodious electric establishment in Dearborn county, and presented by a delegation, during the campaign, to Chairman Heston. Mrs. Harrison was the recipient, yesterday, of a handsome silk crazy quilt, sent by the ladies of the Episcopal Church at Los Angeles, Cal.--it having been, at a church fair, voted to her as the most popular lady. The General, at about the same time, received from Buffalo, N. Y., a large, substantial easy chair, of mahogany frame, elegantly upholstered in colored plush.

Another received by the General, was a large folio of rich Turkish morocco, the inner pages of which are lined with blue satin, on which is stamped, in letters of gold, the following congratulatory address: UNION BIBLICAL SEMINARY, DARTON, O. To Benjamin Harrison, President-elect of the United States, Greeting: We, whose names are herewith attached, congratulate you on the result of the election Nov. 6, 1888. Appreciating your Christian integrity, confiding in your statesmanship, and hoping for the prosperity of the Nation under your administration, we most heartily join in the adoption of the following sentiments, extracted from the prayer of the Rev. Dr. G. A. Fanning, of this seminary, offered Wednesday morning, Nov. 7, 1888, in the seminary chapel. "We thank Thee, Father, that one so noble and worthy as our President-elect, Benjamin Harrison, has been chosen to be the head of this Nation. Grant him Thy blessing more and more that he may serve Thee with wisdom and integrity. The wishes of this people may be furthered and Thy cause built up that will may be put away. The Lord bless him."

Beneath this prayer is the quotation: A man is a match room for him and bringeth him before great men.--Prov. xvii, 16. The address is signed by the Rev. Dr. Miller, general manager of the Union Biblical Seminary, the members of the faculty and forty students. In response to a letter from the Tippecanoe Club of this county General Harrison yesterday sent the following: INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 15, 1888. J. M. Yifford, President Tippecanoe Club, Indianapolis, Ind. My Dear Sir--I have found it impossible to acknowledge the letters and telegrams of congratulation which I have received from you and your friends. I am glad to know that you are all well, and that you are all so full of affectionate remembrance. Very truly yours, BENJAMIN HARRISON.

A Harrison Veteran. Westfield (Mass.) Times. Tarrus N. Fowler, the great pigeon-hunter, who is over eighty-three years of age, and who voted for William Henry Harrison, in 1840, and for his grandson, Benjamin, this year, was in a Republican procession there last Monday week, with two sons and three grandsons, making three generations of good Republicans. Mr. Fowler, who is one of the best preserved men of his age in western Massachusetts, has a son, Alden S., in Indianapolis, who is a great admirer of the President-elect.

THE STATE NORMAL SCHOOL. Reports of Trustees and Others Concerning It. --The Appropriations Wanted. The biennial report of the Indiana State Normal School, containing the statements of the board of trustees, the president of the faculty, the secretary and the treasurer of the board, for the two years ending Oct. 31, 1888, was filed with the Governor, yesterday. It is prefaced with a list of the officials connected with the institution, and opens with a reference to the disastrous fire of April 9, 1888, by which the fine building and library of the school, at Terre Haute, were destroyed. At the time of this loss, the institution contained 624 students, representing eighty of the ninety-two counties of this State. The Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, of Terre Haute, offered its building, and this and a portion of the Terre Haute High-school, which was also kindly offered, enabled the work of the school to go on without interruption. The city of Terre Haute also gave $50,000 toward the erection of a new building, and that has been completed so far as the walls, iron and stone-work are concerned, and the roofing is completed, with the exception of putting on the shingles. The cost of the work thus far is $47,250, and $2,750 was expended for removing the debris of the old building, thus making up the amount of the city's contribution. The total loss by the fire, including buildings, library, etc., is estimated at $225,000. The new building, according to present plans, will cost $70,000, and it is proposed to erect a further edification, that the boilers and furnaces shall be placed in a separate structure, at a cost of $13,000. The trustees want $10,000 for incidental expenses for each of the next two years, and they recommend that as Terre Haute has already contributed $100,000 in money and ground valued at $25,000, that that city be released from further liability under her contract for one-half the expense of repairs.

The report of President W. W. Parsons, which accompanies that of the trustees, refers to changes in the faculty and the difficulty of finding suitable teachers, but speaks highly of the present teachers and pupils. The average term enrollment, he says, is shown by the records to have increased from forty-seven in 1870, to 449 in 1888. There were 629 students in attendance during the spring term of this year, and besides the counties of the State represented there were pupils from ten States. Of the 338 graduates and 4,997 undergraduates of the school a majority are employed in teaching. An urgent appeal is made to the Legislature, that a bill be introduced to replace the ten-thousand-dollar one lost. The secretary's and treasurer's reports contain itemized accounts of expenditures. The following items are the appropriation made for one-half cost of repairing building, $60,000; boiler-house and heating apparatus, $13,000; library, $15,000; furniture, $5,000; scientific apparatus, $5,000. Total, $98,000. Besides these the following items are submitted as needing the attention of the Legislature: Deficiency in the incidental fund for 1888, $1,301.54; deficiency for 1887, $7,000; stone walls and fences, $5,388.99; incidentals, $10,000.

New Incorporations. Articles of incorporation were filed with Secretary of State Griffin yesterday, for the Thomas D. Scott Company, which is formed for the manufacture of lounges and other furniture in this city. The capital stock is $10,000, divided into shares of $25 each. Thomas D. Scott, Perry Owsen and Arthur E. McKersden are named as directors for the first year.

Christ Before Pilate. This is the last Saturday but one of the exhibition in Plymouth Church. In other cities the children of the public and Sunday-schools have visited this picture in large numbers. It is a great and noble picture, and it has a very vivid impression upon the young, and moreover one which will last throughout life.

Meeting of Municipal Committees. The Council committee on public light, the aldermanic committee having in charge the proposed annexation of territory on the north side of the city, and the finance committee of the Council, will all meet, this afternoon, in the city clerk's office.
