A Good Law.

The new pension law will supply every needy veteran with a support. If a man is worth a million and is not wounded, he ought not to have a pension. If a soldier depends on his labor for his living, and not on a fat bank account, he can have his pension, whether wounded or not. It is a good law, and will give relief to thousands.

Where the Force Comes In.

Perhaps Chicago's series of hot waves may enable her to get up the necessary steam for the world's fair. She mustn't allow her ardor to cool off if she expects to fare well.

Some Chance for This Monument.

Another monument is projected in New York. This time the subject is Christopher Columbus, and the statue, which is to stand in the lower part of the city and be one hundred feet high, pedestal and all, is to cost $200,000. As it is conducted by Italian capital, New York capitalists project stands some chance of success.

MRS. LESLIE'S MARRIAGE.

License Procured and Afterward Canceled—Peculiar Mystery Preserved.

LONDON, July 11.—In regard to the rumor about the Lueville-Leslie marriage, it is certain that on Thursday evening the Marquis De Lueville applied for a special marriage license at the Victoria-street registry office, in which street he had lived for years. He said the case was urgent, and he arranged that the marriage should be solemnized at the registry office in the vestry hall at 9 o'clock on Saturday morning, as the bride and bridegroom had sailed for the United States. The license was canceled to-day and the marriage postponed for a few days. The legal form of the application reads: "Marquis De Lueville, forty-three years of age, for several years resident at No. 98 Victoria street, LONDON. LESLIE. The lady is described as 'Frank Leslie, a resident of the Grosvenor Hotel.' Mrs. Leslie had, in fact, been living at the Burlington Hotel, and was there last Thursday. Her name is written in the name-wards of the Marquis's lodgings, while the Burlington is more than a mile away. The greatest secrecy and mystery have been maintained.

THE REPUBLICAN OUTLOOK.

The Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee Thinks It Very Favorable. Interview with Hon. James J. Belden. "I believe that the Republicans will hold their own in the next congressional elections, and that the next House of Representatives will be Republican."

Water Snake and Trout.

Glastonbury (Conn.) Spectator. A trout fisherman here saw a big water snake catch a trout the other day. The serpent girded through a still reach of meadow water on the stream, a few inches beneath the surface. The trout was seen without making a ripple, darted on the sleeping trout near an overhanging bank of turf. The fish had not time to make a movement before the black serpent caught it by the tail. Then came the watchful Glastonbury man's chance. He dipped his trout rod suddenly under the snake and threw both serpent and trout over the bank of the stream. Thereupon the enraged water snake disgorged the trout, whose tail was about half way down his throat, and started viciously toward the fisherman with jaws agape. But the Glastonbury man was ready for the attack with a club he picked up on the bank, and easily dispatched the serpent. The trout was a half-pound fellow. It was the first time in his experience, the fisherman said later, that he ever fished for trout with a water snake.

The White Furniture Craze.

Chicago Herald. The white-furniture craze which has set in is somewhat appalling. Every other woman buys a pot of white enamel paint and proceeds to strike terror to the hearts of all beholders by smearing and daubing everything with which she comes in contact. It is all very well when the content with taking the old wooden-backed, spint-bottomed chair that Aunt Sally left, or some hideous bureau which has been relegated to the back hall, but when the ruthlessly sacrifices her pretty cherry and oak suits to a passing fad, then she is indeed a terrible sight. The craze is spreading. Quaint cabinets, desks and dressing-tables which come in white are enough to turn any woman's head, but she who has a moderate income had best consider long ere she paints her furniture, for in an hour will surely come when she will long to paint it red.

Governor Hill's Flag.

New York Tribune. It is stated by the Kingston Freeman that Governor Hill has invented a State flag, and it is hoisted over the stars and stripes wherever he goes. This must be a mistake. Wherever he goes Hill doesn't hoist any banner. He hoists one of his own speeches, prepared in advance at Albany and copies furnished on application. Ask the Hendricks monument committee.

They Probably Are.

Springfield Republican. Governor Nicholls's manifold veto of the lottery bill in Louisiana, as was expected, could not avail against the bill. The purchased Legislature, and the bill was easily passed over yesterday. It now remains to be demonstrated whether the people of the State, as well as the honest citizens, are won by this huge gambling swindle.
