KILLED IN A WELL

Crunnell Falls Out of a Bucket While Being Drawn to the Surface by Fellow-Workmen.

Calvin Crunnell, a colored well-digger, in the employ of Frank Tansel, of Clermont, was killed in rather a peculiar manner yesterday morning. Tansel has the contract for sinking a well on the farm of Robert Marsh, near that place, and the work had progressed to a depth of nearly thirty-four feet, the well being dry, when the men were driven out by fear of fire-damp, signs of which were detected. After a few moments' delay, Crunnell volunteered to descend, saying he was not afraid of fire-damp, and was used to it. There was some effort to deter him, but he treated the matter so lightly that his fellow-workmen finally consented to lower him in the large bucket used for that purpose. When part way down he called to them to pull him out, which they proceeded to do as rapidly as possible, and had hoisted him to within a few feet of the surface when he fell out of the bucket. By the time the workmen succeeded in getting his body from the well his life was extinct. Coroner Wagner was notified, and an inquest was held yesterday afternoon, resulting in a verdict of accidental death. Crunnell was fifty-two years old, and leaves a wife and four children. He lived in Hendricks county, just across the line, and about three miles from Clermont.

PEOPLE IN PARK AND CAMP

At Bethany the Christians' Missionary Cause Has Much of the Day Given It.

Exhibition of Articles from the Far-Off Lands Where the Church of Disciples Has Sent Its Preachers—Revival at Acton.

The pleasantly cool days of this week have encouraged the sojourners at Bethany to extend their acquaintance of the country surrounding them. So, daily immediately after the early breakfast, merry parties have set off on exploring expeditions toward all points of the compass. The summit of Mount Etna, the next highest elevation in Indiana, and situated within a half-hour's walk of the park, is the point to which many of these expeditions are directed. The ascent of this hill is not difficult enough to be a drawback, and if it was the view from the top, revealing in the distance the town of Centerville, a river lazily winding its way among the hills and fields would compensate most people for their trouble. Fishing parties to the mill-dam just beyond Brooklyn and to the river west of the park have also been a source of amusement to the young people at the park.

Starting early in the morning the general manager of the camp set out to be Dr. Zollars' talk to the young preachers, which many besides those for whom they are especially intended attend and enjoy. Yesterday morning the Doctor spoke upon a preacher's education. All the great reformers were educated men, he said, and when the minister of the day it is incumbent that he should be at home in the dispensing of his knowledge so that he may inspire his hearers with confidence. Among the studies which the Doctor mentioned as aids to a minister were a knowledge of Greek, Hebrew, Greek, psychology, rhetoric, natural science, history, mathematics and homiletics. He advised ministers not to be in a hurry to preach, but to first acquire a knowledge of what they are to preach. He closed with a few words to the old ministers. Immediately following this talk was an informal reception held by the Christian Women's Mission Board. The ladies exhibited to all their friends many curious articles from India and Japan. The wearing apparel, musical instruments and portraits of India missionaries and natives were examined with interest by those gathered in the board's cottage. Pretty articles from Jamaica, pressed and mounted ferns and mosses were shown and offered for sale. When the people assembled, at 11 A. M., to hear the lecture of G. L. Wharton, a map of India was exhibited. It was made, as was afterwards explained, in Australia, "by use of needles, thread, ladies' fingers and a man's brain. The boundaries, rivers and towns being of narrow ribbons sewed upon white cloth."

After the audience had joined in singing the old missionary hymn "From Greenland's icy mountains and India's coral strand," Mr. Wharton, who, for eight years, was a missionary to India, was introduced. He first spoke of the geography of India, saying that, although it was only about half as large as the United States, it possessed one-sixth of the population of the globe, and that a great variety of climate is one of its striking characteristics. Mr. Wharton told of British rule, of its faults, and also its manifold advantages. After explaining the geographical and political condition, he enumerated the number of missions established there, and read from the annual missionary book for 1889 an account being of a man who had been in the water and baptized 170 people before he came out. Other statistics which he gave were very gratifying to the missionary workers. He said that in India there were better houses and better things to eat than in generally thought, and that the people are not so different from the people of this country. The lack of preachers is a drawback to speedy Christianization, there being only one to every 700,000 souls, and there are territories as large as Indiana with not a single missionary in them.

The session of the State Missionary Society began at 2 P. M. In the absence of Dr. H. Bennet, who was expected to deliver the opening address, the society proceeded to transact some preliminary business. State evangelist Rev. J. L. Parsons, read the report of the executive board in regard to the State work. He has only been an evangelist since the resignation of J. P. Ewing, and he reported that during the past year he had visited several churches had been founded and were in good condition. Howard Cale then made a partial report of Mr. Ewing's work. Following this was a discussion and appointment of committees by the chairman.

In the evening Rev. Dr. R. J. Lucas delivered an address upon "The Two Books, Nature and Revelation." He said that revelation was committed to men; that God had made spreading abroad the truth a duty of the special work of the church. At the conclusion of the meeting there was a solicitation of funds for the carrying forward of the work in Indiana. This morning Dr. Zollars will complete his course of lectures, and the assembly lecture will be delivered by Robert Moffet, of Ohio. In the afternoon the State Missionary Society will resume its proceedings.

Prominent among the arrivals of Wednesday and Thursday were Mr. and Mrs. James A. Pritchard, Maria Jameson, Wm. Wallace and Mrs. Chilton, of the Methodist church, Wharton, Bethany, W. Va.; L. C. Brewer, Danville; W. J. Loos, Louisville, Ky.; John Brazelton, North Vernon.

Preaching at Acton.

The interest in the meetings at Acton is sustained by the earnestness with which their leaders strengthen their teachings and appeals. Yesterday the morning prayer service and the Bible readings were largely attended, and in the afternoon the Rev. M. B. Hyde had a good audience. His sermon was based on the twelfth verse of the first chapter of Second Timothy. He said nothing so keeps a man strong as a conviction that he is right. Paul had this consciousness. "We have," he continued, "a great many questions about theories, but they are not so important as the question, Am I right and loyal to the right? A man recently stood on the platform from which I speak and labored one hour to prove that Shakespeare was not the author of the writings ascribed to him. But no man has attempted to disprove the historic Christ. But Paul could go so far as to say I know Him. He knew him not only as the historic Christ, but as a divine Savior. Peter knew Him in theory when he was profane, as well as when he praised Him; yet there was more than theory when he adored Him; for he praised Him as a Savior. There was a spiritual impartation that brought with it profound conviction and dauntless courage. Therefore, faith is essential to knowledge in religious matters."

In the evening Dr. Bolton preached a strong sermon, and after that service, as well as in the afternoon, the altar was crowded with seekers of religion. Nearly all the best cottages at the camp are occupied, and a large number of visitors were on the grounds yesterday, among whom were noticed Rev. G. S. Conner, Rev. T. W. Northcutt and wife, and Mrs. G. Jenkins, of Greensburg. Preparations are being made for several meetings next Sunday, so that every one in the great crowd expected can be reached.

Today the usual sessions will be held with the afternoon sermon from Rev. J. F. Woodruff, of Ames Church, Saturday there will be a meeting at 6 o'clock in the morning, and in the afternoon Dr. Williamson will give his Bible reading on "Temptation."

Fledges Not Fulfilled.

Many citizens, without regard to politics, are criticizing the Council for its delay in making street improvements. The Democrats went into power with their platform of pledges that have not been redeemed, and many of the people in the southern wards are making loud complaints. The new cry that has been raised on the sewerage question, some of the Democratic Councilmen insisting that no payments should be laid, no matter how many property-owners desire them until the streets are sewerage. "But that is all a blind," remarked a Democratic Councilman to a reporter last night, "for the pavement ordinances can be passed and then there will be plenty of time left to put the sewerage in. I am not averse to the use of some of the methods that have been practiced since this new Council went in, but what can I do to help it? Absolutely nothing."

FOR SPECIFIC PURPOSE.

An Appropriation for Maintenance Cannot Be Used for Painting and Equipping.

William Rahm, jr., president of the board of trustees of the Southern Hospital for Insane, at Evansville, wrote to the Attorney-general a few days ago on behalf of the board, asking for an opinion. He wanted to know whether they had the right to spend money out of their $55,000 annual appropriation for the purpose of painting and of buying carpets, dry goods, linen and bed clothes. Mr. Rahm adds that the building needs considerable repainting inside, and that the central dome on the ground floor ought to be decorated to make it attractive, as it is the intention to use it for a visitors' reception-room. In compliance with Mr. Rahm's request the Attorney-general yesterday rendered an opinion in which it is held that under the statutes it is clear that the Legislature intended that the appropriation of $55,000, which was approved March 2, 1889, should defray all expenses of construction, equipment and furnishing of the hospital, and that the $55,000 appropriation should be devoted solely to maintenance and repairs. The opinion defines the meaning of the words "equipment and maintenance," and holds that the authority to maintain cannot be construed into an authority to equip. In the ordinary life of an institution when equipment wears out it is held that the Legislature intended that the appropriation should be used to purchase entirely new equipment, and that the Legislature appropriated the $165,000 for the purpose of equipping the additional hospitals and the regular annual maintenance appropriation should be used to keep the property up after it is equipped. Of the $165,000 appropriated for the construction and equipment of the additional hospitals the State treasury something more than $35,000.

Y. M. C. A. LEAGUE IN TROUBLE.

News and Meridians Have a Controversy About Violations of Rules and a Protested Game.

There is trouble in the Y. M. C. A. League that threatens to disrupt the organization. It all arose from last Saturday's game between the Meridians and News, which the former team won by a score of 8 to 3, and which the News protested because of an infraction of the rules by the Meridians. The latter played a couple of men not members of the league, though not the first one. Hereafter, however, the clubs violating the rules have always lost their game, hence there was no protest, nor would there have been on the part of the News team, it is urged by the Meridians, had Saturday's game not resulted in their favor. The protest was decided against them, and they are talking of disbanding or withdrawing from the League. On the other hand, had the decision been against the News, the Meridians would have expressed intention of doing the same thing, so the dilemma was rather a perplexing one.

The News team's proposition was to play the game over, and it was certainly fair enough, but Captain McKee, of the Meridians, says he will not compromise in that way, for the reason that he had no idea of causing any trouble when he put in the two players Saturday who were not members of the association. He had seen the same thing done before, and it never occurred to him that there would be a protest. Had he thought so he would have either paid the membership fees for them or obtained permission from Captain Eckman, of the News team, to play the men. His club was badly crippled, and he urged that the game be postponed because of the rain, but Eckman insisted upon playing it. His known desire to have it postponed, he urges, is proof absolute that he never thought of an unfair advantage in putting in the two players not members of the association. The members of the News team claim that the rules should be lived up to, and that their position in the matter is right. Their protest is undoubtedly well grounded, but of questionable taste, for, as above suggested, they were not at all provoked, probably never have been agitated. They should abide by the decision and join with the other clubs in seeing to it that the rules be strictly observed. The violation of the rule in that or any other way. The talk on the part of either the Meridians or News of withdrawing if they cannot have a decision to suit them is childish, and the sooner it is abandoned the better all around. Had Saturday's been the first and only instance where the rules had been violated, it would not be as members of the contesting clubs had known of previous infractions and had tacitly countenanced them the only thing that can consistently be done is to let the game go as played and avoid a repetition of the trouble.

He was at Mitchell Tuesday where the Second district Republicans met, and at Evansville Wednesday, where he found the men of the First district at one of the largest political meetings of the kind ever held in that city. At Mitchell, also, the Mayor of that city was present, and at both places the enthusiasm, harmony and earnestness promised well for a vigorous campaign.

William Sayres caused a sensation last night, and led the police a long chase before they arrested and put him behind bars at the station-house. Early in the evening, accompanied by a young lady, he spent an hour or more in driving. At 11 o'clock they drove the entire length of the Washington-street asphalt pavement, going west. From the way Sayres lashed his whip the nature of Pop and Andy's ride determined to stop the couple if they returned. In a few minutes, however, they were seen to turn south on Tennessee street and to proceed by turning, overtook them on Kentucky avenue. Kinney attempted to stop the horse, but was thrown aside. Climbing over the rear of the seat, he got into the driver's seat, and the Sayres resisted, but was overpowered and sent to the central station. He will be tried this morning on the charges of profanity, fast driving and cruelty to animals.

THE MACHINERY MOLDERS.

They Spend Part of the Day Visiting and Make Up Lost by Holding a Long Night Session.

The meeting of the National Brotherhood of Machinery Molders continued yesterday as a committee of the whole, considering proposed amendments to the constitution of the organization. In the afternoon the delegates were taken about the city, visiting the principal foundries, the State Capitol and the Hospital for the Insane. They were accompanied by Councilman Markey. To make up for the lost time, so as to be able to finish their work to-day, a night session was held at the headquarters of the organization, to abolish the office of treasurer and constitute a bank in the city of the president a depository of funds, was suggested. The constitution was also amended as to provide for the protection and support of committees appointed to adjust labor troubles. The office of corresponding secretary was abolished, and the duties added to those of the financial secretary. By a new law the president may be selected from among all the members, and not as heretofore, from among delegates only. A provision was incorporated in the constitution that any differences that may arise between a molder and his employer must first be considered by the local brotherhood and an offer to arbitrate made before the International Brotherhood can be called into the case. This was explained to mean that every method must be taken to remove differences by arbitration before a strike is ordered. The convention will close to-day with the election of officers and the selection of a city in which to hold the next convention. There seems to be but little division as to the officers, but a sharp fight is on between the cities for the convention.
