

COLONEL JEROME BONAPARTE

Interesting Career of the Great Napoleon's Grandnephew.

Story of an Ambitious Life, with Scenes from Two Continents and Several Generations.

New York Herald. Col. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, who died last night of cancer, at his summer home in Beverly, Mass., had an interesting career. He was the oldest grandson of Jerome Bonaparte, King of Westphalia, and a grandnephew of Napoleon Bonaparte. Although born in America, and for most of his life a resident of Baltimore, he enjoyed at one time the distinction of being the hope of the Bonaparte party in France, and upon the downfall of Napoleon III was pushed forward for the regency. His followers at that time hoped he would succeed to the throne of France.

The story of Colonel Bonaparte is a romance, and it began two generations before his birth. His grandfather was Jerome Bonaparte, a younger brother of the great Napoleon. The first consul of France conceived the idea of making this younger brother one of the rulers of the earth, and with that end in view, early in life, he gave him an important command in the navy. The young man rapidly advanced, and in 1803, as Captain Bonaparte, brought his ship to America. And now begins the story of those events which made the name of the man just deceased a romance. Capt. Bonaparte, at a ball given by Samuel Jackson Smith and his wife, met Elizabeth Patterson, daughter of William Patterson, a shipowner, and the second wealthiest man in the State of Maryland. It was a case of love at first sight. The young man, who eventually they were married in great state in Baltimore, by Archbishop Carroll. Captain Bonaparte had not consulted his brother, but he was a match for the girl. She was very young, and positively refused to recognize the match. Her father, who was a public and private teacher, who was eager to marry, but who received no other help, hence anxious parents, as well as a Jewish doctor, set the matter to rest. The great Napoleon, however, was mistaken. He did not know of what stern trial his American grandnephew was to undergo. Mrs. Napoleon laughed at the royal decree and declared that she would go to France with her husband. But she was not to be thwarted. As the ship approached the shores of France it was met by the American consul, who was driven away and forced to take refuge in England.

Once in France, Captain Bonaparte quickly yielded to his brother. Napoleon promised him to care for his wife, granting her an income of $100,000 a year. He promised this with the condition that she should not retain the name of Bonaparte—a condition, however, which the plucky wife refused to accept. Napoleon, who was devoted to her by the marriage declared void by the Pope, but Miss V. refused to be balked, and called a royal decree of divorce to be passed.

TOOK ANOTHER WIFE

The subsequent career of her husband may be summed up in a few words. In 1807 he was made King of Westphalia and was married to the daughter of the Duke of Wurttemberg. In 1813, on the fall of the Bonapartes, he was deposed and exiled. Meantime Mrs. Bonaparte, proudly disdaining the offers of the royal family, remained in England until after the birth of her son and then returned to America. This son was the late Emperor Napoleon Bonaparte, and the father of Colonel Jerome Bonaparte, who has just died. He had a second son, Charles Joseph Bonaparte, who has not had some prominence at the Baltimore bar.

This first Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, Colonel Bonaparte's father, must have proved a great disappointment to his mother. She was ambitious in the extreme, and the object of her life, after her desertion by her husband, was to see her name and that of her descendants. She strenuously insisted to the day of her death that her son should be a member of the family of Westphalia, and when by his business was declared in the succession to the throne of France, she believed that her son was the rightful heir. She spent her life in asserting these claims, and gained great sympathy in Europe, where she died in 1857. Her son, however, though not adverse to the honors claimed for him by his mother, declined to be an active factor in the affair. He preferred a quiet life, and lived most of it in Baltimore. He studied law, but did not practice. He developed great shrewdness in business, and was a successful and a great fortune. Balked in her ambition for her only son, Mrs. Bonaparte turned to her eldest daughter, who was named for his father, Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte. He inherited much of his grandmother's character, and early in life set out upon a career which pleased her greatly and revived her hopes that she herself might yet attain the rights which she believed belonged to her family.

INDIANAPOLIS PRAISED BY VETERANS.

Louisville Commercial. Veterans from the national reunion in Indianapolis are unanimous in their praise of that city and its people for the excellence and liberality of the arrangements made for the reunion. The city was large enough to accommodate such a crowd as attended the National Encampment, and that enterprising city arranged for the comfort and convenience of all in all respects to the occasion. The National Encampment at Indianapolis will go down in history as the most successful and most successful of these great annual gatherings of the veterans of the war.

VETERANS IN PARADE.

New York Mail and Express. While the parade was great, considered by itself, it was pathetic when compared with former ones. Only about half of the veterans attending the encampment took part. Age has weakened many of them, and old wounds are now telling on them. The strength of their loyalty is unabated, however, and they know their friends—and their enemies, too.

Governor Matthews Arraigned.

Chicago Mail. Governor Matthews is to be commended, of course, for doing his duty as Roby, but he doesn't deserve much credit for postponing it until the eleventh hour. It was not heroic, but cowardly and costly.

COSTLY MISTAKES.

Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph. The Pension Office employs a good deal of time in reviewing orders that it promulgated when Hoke Smith was very young in office.

A TARIFF LESSON.

Toledo Blade. Every free trade organ in England is enthusiastically in favor of reforming the McKinley tariff act. What a lesson there is in it.

fall of Napoleon III. Mrs. Bonaparte played her trump card. There was a large party which she hoped to see her brilliant grandnephew. Daily and finally succeeded to the throne. When all her plans went to pieces she returned to America broken hearted. Colonel Bonaparte arrived in the Grand of the Empire of France from 1867 to 1872. In the fall of the empire he with difficulty escaped with his life from the Commune in Paris. At the close of the war in 1871 he returned to this country, and the same year he married in New York, K. L. M. Mrs. Caroline Reley Edgar, formerly Mrs. M. L. Ploton, a granddaughter of Daniel Webster.

UNMARRIED JEWESSES.

Thousands of pretty, young and accomplished Jewish maidens, who are languishing for husbands, may be found in every portion of the United States. They are eligible Israelites, and their brides shall be equipped with a n'dau, or dowry, as it is called, and their station in life. As a majority of them cannot furnish the required marriage portion, and will not abjure their faith by becoming converts to other religions, they virtually place themselves "on the shelf," and thereby largely increase the old maid problem. These maidens are of various ages, and are employed as saleswomen, milliners, dressmakers, bookkeepers, stenographers and public and private teachers, who are eager to marry, but who receive no other help, hence anxious parents, as well as a Jewish doctor, set the matter to rest. The great Napoleon, however, was mistaken. He did not know of what stern trial his American grandnephew was to undergo. Mrs. Napoleon laughed at the royal decree and declared that she would go to France with her husband. But she was not to be thwarted. As the ship approached the shores of France it was met by the American consul, who was driven away and forced to take refuge in England.

HEBREW STANDARD.

General Harrison's speech-making ability is unimpaired. His address to the veterans who called upon him at his Indianapolis home, was a masterpiece of fervor and of recognition of the services of the Nation by the boys in blue. Speaking of the pension question he said: "We may do as much for the boys in blue as we can, but the soldier's integrity and honor shall not be wantonly impeached. A presumption shall be made in their favor. He will not ask that any who have fraudulently obtained a place on the pension roll shall remain there. He will ask that other laws be made for the veterans who are to be proved and not presumed, shall be applied to the soldier. This general principle, which is the basis of the pension law, is acceptable to every right-thinking patriotic man."

CURES FOR INDIGESTION.

The best relief for a bad stomach is heat. One authority prescribes hot drinking water, and another prescribes the system of the waste material, taken by the pupil at intervals of five or eight minutes. Another prescribes the use of hot water, at the same time flushing the stomach and intestines. Another cure for the indigestion is the use of hot water, which is to be indulged in the luxury of invalidism, is the application of heat in the form of a hot water bag, or a rubber bag filled with hot water, a napkin full of hot water, or a paper bag containing a brick, and placed over the stomach. All these cures imply a holiday to the stomach for the overworked organs of digestion.

AVOIDING OFFENSE.

Jimson—I say, old boy, come in and take a drink. Billson—who has tried Jimson's pot-licker before—Um—really, I'd be delighted, but—er—important matter to attend to. Jimson—What's that? Billson—The matter is, I'm a dollar less than a common churchyard—nothing good on at all. Jimson—Get out! Your folks are out of the house, and I'm a dollar less than a common churchyard—nothing good on at all. Jimson—Get out! Your folks are out of the house, and I'm a dollar less than a common churchyard—nothing good on at all.

LOCAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

The Trade of the Week was Very Satisfactory. In the wholesale departments the trade of the week closing Saturday was spoken of as very satisfactory, while in the main prices have ruled steady. Poultry, seed and hide markets are easier. The market East is overstocked with poultry. There are some articles which it is quite difficult to quote. There are so many varieties of peaches and styles of putting them up that one must quote them by the bushel as ranging from 75 cents to $2.25 per bushel. Apples also vary greatly in quality, and the difference there is in quality. Colles are firm at the advance of Thursday last, while sugar rule easier. The provision market is firm and the distribution much larger than thirty days ago. There was a little more life to the local grain market yesterday. Wheat advanced, and corn was firm at bids given and outside steady. Track bids ruled as follows: Wheat—No. 2 red, 50c; No. 3 red, 50c; rejected by sample, 40c; wagon, 70c; No. 1 white, 40c; No. 2 white, 40c; No. 3 white, 35c; No. 4 white, 30c; No. 5 white, 25c; No. 6 white, 20c;
