

In rebuttal, and Mr. Shelby responded that even under those circumstances it could not be said that it was an attempt, under the guise of rebuttal, to carry on a case.

After half an hour had been consumed by this argument, Judge Bradley declined the point, saying that there could be no doubt about the admissibility of the letter itself, if it was in evidence, as a basis of cross-examination.

Thereupon Mrs. Louise Lowell took a seat in the witness box. She said that she had known Colonel Breckinridge since February, 1886, having become acquainted with him at the House of Representatives where she had been given an office to carry on business as a stenographer and typewriter in the corridor by the committee on post-offices.

"Did you work for Colonel Breckinridge?" Mr. Wilson inquired. "I did." "Did he bring manuscript of a letter to you?" "He did, and I copied it in typewrite."

"How was that letter addressed?" "I object," interrupted one of the Breckinridge attorneys, who protested that there was no proof of the letter having been sent to Miss Lowell, and that she was not to be examined to sustain the objection would be to nullify the purpose of admitting the witness.

"Now, what was on those envelopes?" continued Mr. Wilson. "Miss Pollard, No. 78 Upper street, Lexington, Ky."

"And how do you remember that?" "I have the envelope in a book in which I noted the address."

"Have you the book?" "I have, and the book was passed around for inspection of the lawyers."

"Feeling sure that sooner or later I would hear more of Miss Pollard, and not wishing to trust my memory, I made that memorandum," she explained, and continuing, said: "The Breckinridge envelope, and two or three envelopes separately, then a package of a dozen small ones, yellowed with age, and not such envelopes as a business man would use."

The question of the substance of those letters was objected to by the Breckinridge attorneys for the present. The first communication, said the witness, was addressed to "My Dear Sister Louise," and was written by Mr. Wilson, and she testified that she had never seen Miss Pollard until this morning.

"In her books the witness had merely entered the amounts of work done, the name of the party and the amounts charged, so that she could refer to them in case she should be asked to produce them."

take us to some safe place. He took us up to the elevated road, up toward Fifty-second or Fifty-third street. It was a large building that looked like a hotel.

Here Mr. Wilson suggested that it was near the hour of adjournment, and he desired to take up an entirely different line of examination; it was hardly worth while to proceed further, and the court adjourned.

Mr. Pollard was a Mason. LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 3.—The records of the Masonic Wards' and Orphans' Home, in this city, show that Horatio, John and Rose N. Pollard, children of John D. Pollard, were admitted to the lodge on 1871 upon recommendation of Crab Orchard Lodge, No. 42. These records establish the fact that Madeline Pollard's father was a Mason or his children would never have been admitted to the lodge.

The proceedings of the Grand Lodge of I. O. O. F., Kentucky, from 1872 to 1887, show that John D. Pollard, father of Madeline Pollard, was past grand master and past grand representative of Crab Orchard Lodge, No. 42, at Frankfort. The 42nd Fellows buried him.

WITH BANDS OF MUSIC Coxe's Commonweal Army Welcomed to Allegheny City.

Houses Decorated and the "Soldiers" Greeted with Cheers—General Frey's "6000" Arrive at St. Louis.

PITTSBURG, April 3.—The commonweal army has arrived. It reached Lower Allegheny at 1 o'clock and was met with bands by the Iron Molders' Union, pattern makers, boiler makers, bakers and other labor organizations and a large concourse of people.

When the army reached Exposition Park at least 25,000 curious spectators were assembled. During the afternoon the usual meeting was held, at which Coxe and Browne held forth in their customary strain. This evening a local music manager secured for his stage color bearer Jackson, "Coxy," a dog, which he carried to the park.

THE CALIFORNIA CONTINGENT OF COMMONWEALERS REAR ST. LOUIS. ST. LOUIS, April 3.—General Frey's army of unemployed workmen arrived at Jefferson Barracks from Poplar Bluff to-day and camped in the railroad yards at Ivory station. The army presented a picturesque sight as the train pulled in. The commonwealers were all on the tops of the box cars, and many were dressed in blankets.

ST. LOUIS, April 3.—The San Francisco contingent of the Commonweal Army, numbering 350 men, left the city to-day on the ferry for Oakland. Thence it is their intention to proceed to Washington. At Sacramento they will be joined by one hundred more unemployed, who are now in camp there, awaiting the arrival of the San Francisco contingent. Early this morning the recruits who, for several days, have been waiting at the ferry for the arrival of provisions for their contemplated journey began to assemble at their rendezvous.
