A ROYAL BETROTHAL

The Czarewitsch and Princess Alix, of Hesse, to Wed.

Emperor William Conveys the News to Queen Victoria at Coburg—Terms Demanded by Brazilian Rebels.

COBURG, April 25.—The betrothal is announced by the Czar and the Duke of Saxe-Coburg to the Princess Alix Victoria Helena Louise Beatrice, of Hesse. A few days ago it was reported that the Czarewitsch intended resigning his succession to the throne in favor of his younger brother, the Duke Michael. The belief was that this action was contemplated on account of the opposition of the Czar to his marriage with the Princess Alix. It was also stated at the time that the Czarewitsch would never marry. All obstacles to the happiness of the young couple seem to have been removed and the announcement of their betrothal at this time, before the dispersal of the many royal personages who had assembled for the wedding of yesterday, affords opportunity for the customary congratulations.

Emperor William, was the first to communicate the news of the betrothal to Queen Victoria, who expressed herself as being highly pleased. Emperor William then walked from the ducal Schloss to the Edinburgh palace, accompanied by Col. J. V. Swaine, the British military attaché at Berlin, and communicated the news to the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. Emperor William is believed to have been mainly instrumental in bringing about the betrothal from the fact that he has the news before Queen Victoria or the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and the evident delight of his Imperial Majesty is cited as evidence of the importance which he attaches to the betrothal.

Emperor William, who is deeply bronzed by exposure to the sun, and who leaves tomorrow for some shooting on the estate of the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar, at Weimar.

The Czarewitsch was born May 6, 1882 (May 18 Russian style), at St. Petersburg. The betrothal is reported to be the subject of grave apprehension on the part of his parents, the Emperor and Empress, on this account that he set out on a tour of the world in 1881, which came near ending in a crazy Japanese policeman and would probably have been killed by the timely intervention of the British Consul, Sir Francis de Greve.

The Czarewitsch's mother, the Princess Alix, of Hesse, was born at Darmstadt on June 6, 1872, and is the youngest of the four sisters of the Grand Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. She was married yesterday to Princess Victoria, of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. The eldest sister, the Princess Victoria, the wife of Prince Louis of Battenberg, and the second sister, the Princess Marie, the wife of Prince Duke Sergius of Russia, brother of the Czar. The third sister, Princess Irene, is married to the Duke of Saxe-Weimar, and the fourth, the Princess Marie, is married to the Duke of Saxe-Weimar.

Emperor William and his bride made their state entry into Darmstadt yesterday morning. The procession halted at the residence of the Emperor and Empress, where the chief burgomaster delivered an address of welcome to the bride and groom. The bride and groom were then taken to the castle where a cotillion was given.

Insurgents Submit Terms to Brazil's President—Dispatches from Buenos Ayres and Rio de Janeiro say: An envoy representing the President-elect of Brazil, Senor Prudente Moraes, has had interviews with Senor Silveira Martins, the civil leader of the insurgents. The envoy stated that he wished to arrange for peace in the State of Rio Grande do Sul, and asked Senor Martins to define the conditions which would be acceptable. Senor Martins reported that the insurgents demanded the deposition of the Governor of Rio Grande do Sul, an election throughout the State, and the withdrawal of all military and naval officers who have taken part in the revolt and amnesty for all political offenders.

Bayard Gives the British Taft. LONDON, April 25.—The Duke of Cambridge, Duke of Saxe-Weimar, and the Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, the American ambassador, were the chief guests at the banquet given to-night by the Spectacle Makers' Company in Grocers' Hall. Lord Morris toasted Mr. Bayard, who replied in a complimentary address, in which he expressed his desire to meet the hands of the Duke of Cambridge in honest friendship and honest alliance. Referring to an allusion made by the Duke of Cambridge to the Duke of Cambridge, Mr. Bayard said there was no truer friend of the Duke of Cambridge than the Duke of Cambridge, who when her son lamented the loss of his father, she said to him, "The Duke of Cambridge is not dead, he is only in a different part of the world."

The Duke's Annuity Not Cut Off. LONDON, April 25.—In the House of Commons, the Duke of Cambridge's annuity of £10,000 granted to the Duke of Edinburgh, Duke of Saxe-Weimar, was not cut off. The Duke is now a German prince. Mr. Morley's motion, under the act, payment of the annuity ceased to be continued on the Duke of Edinburgh's succeeding to any foreign sovereignty or principality. Enghelmen, he said, objected to continuing the annuity to the Duke of Cambridge, who would spend it in idleness. Henry Labouchere seconded the motion. He referred to the marriage settlement of the Duke of Cambridge, which provided that the Duke of Cambridge should be maintained in the manner of a prince. Mr. Morley's motion was carried.

BRUSH'S TEAM WINS

Cincinnati Opens the Season with a Victory Over Chicago.

The Reds Tally Five in the Sixth Inning and Finish with the Score 10 to 6—Results of Other Ball Games.

CINCINNATI, April 26.—Cincinnati's ball club batted out a victory in the opening game of the championship season. Chicago led up to the sixth inning, when a batting rally, started by Parrott with a home run and ended by Holliday, who cleared the base with a home run, gave the Reds an advantage that was never to be overtaken. Rain fell during the last two innings. Attendance, 6,000. Score: Cincinnati, 10; Chicago, 6.

Louisville, 10; Cleveland, 3. LOUISVILLE, April 26.—Louisville and Cleveland opened the championship season here today. The threatening weather kept the crowd down, but fully 5,000 people were present. Manager Egan pitched a perfect game to six hits, three of which were made in the first inning. Then he steadied down and proved a puzzle for the remainder of the game. The "Coloons," on the other hand, made Young's life miserable, and the pitching staff was unable to hold the game. The "Coloons" were brilliant, Denny making the only error, which was an excusable one. Captain Pfeffer was present, and the game was a close one.

Baltimore, 12; New York, 6. BALTIMORE, April 26.—The Orioles took another game from New York today by lucky hitting in the eighth inning, when the home players scored six runs on two bases on balls, a single and double and Davis's error. Mullane was very wild, but the Orioles were not seriously hurt. Baltimore, 12; New York, 6.

Philadelphia, 9; Washington, 8. WASHINGTON, April 26.—With the game tied in the ninth and the bases full, Stockport pitched a perfect game. The Phillies won the game. Philadelphia, 9; Washington, 8.

Can the Democrats Keep One Even with Their New Rules? NEW YORK EVENING POST. The Democrats in this matter are honest on the wrong side. They will never find the cure for their troubles in the party itself. They must look to the people for their salvation. The Democrats are the only party that has the courage to stand up for the people.

Godkin's Heavy Wit. Brooklyn Eagle (Dem.). The other day General Harrison finished his first series of lectures in San Francisco. With one exception these discourses have proved sources of sweetness and light. The exception may as well be mentioned at once and the only unpleasant feature of the course is the fact that the lecturer has been so long in getting to the point that the audience has become bored.

THE DEMOCRATIC FAILURE.

Senator Cullom's Summary of a Year of Political Blunders and Crimes.

The May Forum has an able and pointed contribution by United States Senator Cullom, in which he reviews the first year of Democratic administration. He says: "In March, 1893, President Cleveland received from the House of Representatives a resolution, a prosperous country, and the control of the interests of a happy, thriving people. The only shadow upon the horizon at that time was the intangible but universal fear of the people that the Democrats, with their motto of 'reform,' would sweep out its proverbial reputation for doing exactly the wrong thing."

With regard to the pension policy of the administration, he says: "The surviving and dependent participants in the great and fearful war had long been waiting for a measure of relief. The Government had appropriated for the purpose a large sum of money, but the pension law had not been passed. The result was that the pensioners were left in a state of destitution and suffering."

As to the pensioners, he says: "The pensioners are the most deserving of the people. They have sacrificed their lives for their country, and they are now in a state of destitution and suffering. The Government has a duty to do for them, and it is a disgrace that it has failed to do so."

As to the industrial situation, he says: "The industrial situation is a sad one. The country is suffering from a depression, and the people are in a state of destitution and suffering. The Government has a duty to do for them, and it is a disgrace that it has failed to do so."

As to the political situation, he says: "The political situation is a sad one. The country is suffering from a depression, and the people are in a state of destitution and suffering. The Government has a duty to do for them, and it is a disgrace that it has failed to do so."

As to the financial situation, he says: "The financial situation is a sad one. The country is suffering from a depression, and the people are in a state of destitution and suffering. The Government has a duty to do for them, and it is a disgrace that it has failed to do so."

As to the social situation, he says: "The social situation is a sad one. The country is suffering from a depression, and the people are in a state of destitution and suffering. The Government has a duty to do for them, and it is a disgrace that it has failed to do so."

HELD UP THE GROCER.

Three Revolvers Had Their Effect on James H. Sanderson.

James H. Sanderson, a grocer at Gillard avenue and Washington street, was compelled to hand over $20 to three robbers at the muzzle of as many revolvers in his store last night, about 8 o'clock. Shortly after 8 o'clock, three men entered the store by the stove in the rear part of the grocery, reading a newspaper, when a slyly dressed man entered the store and asked for some "pickled feet."

"I haven't any such thing in stock," replied Mr. Sanderson. "I don't know what you mean. If you want pickled feet, I will get them for you." "No," said the man, "I want pickled feet."

Mr. Sanderson then noticed two men who had been standing by a front window open the matter, and he saw that they were armed with revolvers. He then saw a third man enter the store, and he saw that he was also armed with a revolver. He then saw that the three men were holding him up.

The robbers then demanded that Mr. Sanderson hand over $20. He then handed over the money, and the robbers then left the store. Mr. Sanderson then called the police, and they are now searching for the robbers.

Carpenters Offer a Compromise. With a view toward arbitrating their differences, the carpenters of the local carpenters yesterday submitted a letter to the contractors, in which they agree to accept 27 1/2 cents an hour until June 1, when the thirty-cent schedule would be expected to go into effect and prevail until April 1, 1895.

Mrs. Alex. Robertson, of Half Rock, Mercer Co., Mo., writes: "For twenty years, I suffered with various diseases, and most of the time was in constant pain which rendered life a great burden. I cannot express what I suffered. I had eight doctors and all the medicines I had from them failed—the case was hopeless."

I was nervous, cold hands and feet, palpitation, headache, backache, constipation, indigestion and no appetite, with bearing-down pains. I got so weak I could not walk around. I had to keep my bed, thinking I would never get any better. One day my husband got one of your little books and read it to me. He said there was nothing doing for me any more. I said I would try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I did try it. After the first few weeks my appetite was better; I was able to sit up in bed.
