MANY QUAKES

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF SEISMIC DISTURBANCES IN ALASKA.

Rev. Sheldon Jackson's Account of the Shocks That Caused Such Havoc and Alarm Recently.

TERRIFYING TIDAL WAVE

THAT SWEEP IN FROM THE ANGRY SEA THIRTY FEET HIGH.

Strange Noises That Issued from the Earth and Strange Winds That Seemed to Blow from All Points.

TORRENTS FROM THE CLOUDS

THAT PERILED LIFE AND ADDED TO THE HORROR OF THE SCENE.

Experience of Miners Who Were Camped on a Glacier—Another Disastrous Earthquake Probable.

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., Sept. 24.—Concerning the recent earthquake along the coast of Alaska, Rev. Sheldon Jackson, educational agent for Alaska, writes as follows from Yakutat under date of Sept. 17: "The first shock was experienced on Sunday, Sept. 3, but being slight caused no alarm. During the following five hours there were fifty-two distinct shocks, culminating at 3 p. m. in a shock so severe that people at Yakutat were hurried violently across their rooms or if outside, they were thrown to the ground, while pictures fell from the walls and dishes and crockery crashed on the shelves, and houses rocked and swayed and whirled, while the mission bell rang violently in the shaking church tower. Panic-stricken, the inhabitants 'gained' their feet and attempted to flee to the hills, only to be again and again thrown to the earth. Gaining the hills and looking seaward, they were transfixed with horror as they saw a great tidal wave, apparently a wall of water thirty feet high, approaching with the speed of a race horse that would engulf their village and sweep away from Yakutat. Before the shore was reached the ocean opened in the bottom of the harbor and into this chasm the tidal wave spent its force, and around it the sea swirled like a great maelstrom. This saved the village from destruction. The tide would rise ten feet in the space of four or five minutes, and then recede to its normal level again. These sudden fluctuations were frequently repeated. Tents were pitched on the hills back of the village and nearly the whole population are camping out, fearing that another tidal wave may come. From the 10th inst. to the present time there have been frequent shocks, one having occurred this afternoon.

MINERS IN PERIL.

"Near Hubbard glacier, on Disenchantment bay, were encamped three miners, A. Fleur, W. Rock and J. W. Johnson, and a mile from them, at an elevation of sixty-four feet above the sea, Messrs. T. Smith, Coo, who the 7th and D. Stevens. When the heavy shock of Sunday, the 19th, was experienced the Fleur party had rigged a machine and was taking the oscillation of the earthquake waves, when without a moment's warning they were all thrown violently across the tent. At the same time, the tent was blown away from its camp and about forty feet above it was split up and the waters were thrown upon the camp and before the miners could regain their feet they were being swept out to sea. Then almost at the same instant they were met by a tidal wave, which picked them up and not only carried them ashore but to a hill forty feet high, landing them on the crest of a divide. Regaining their feet they ran along the crest with the tidal wave boiling and seething at their feet alongside of the hill. Afterwards one of the party found his baggage and clothes one and one-half miles from the mountain side, where the wave had left them.

"Great sparse forests for miles along the shore were uprooted, broken into pieces, and massed into great piles with a roar that was deafening. Large rocks weighing forty tons or more were rolling over one another down the mountain side like so many pebbles.

Hubbard glacier, with its two and a half miles of sea front, thousands of feet thick, extending for miles back to the summit of the mountain, broke for its moorings, and with a grinding, indescribable roar that shook the summit and the mountain side, moved from back to front, a quarter of a mile into the sea. A large creek, fifteen feet wide, with high banks, down whose bed cataracts were rushing, was raised level by the banks. A few minutes later it had sunk back to its former bed, and was again an unrecognizable rushing torrent.

Mountains were thrown down, the sea opened and portions of islands disappeared. The earth opened in many places, after the shock had passed, and the miners commenced preparations to get away. A boat with oars was found a mile up the mountain side, where it had been carried by the waves. With this another boat was secured that was floating on the bay. In these two small boats they started for Yakutat bay, forty-five miles away. The first night they made camp on a large moraine, one and a half miles from the mountain, but a earthquake during the night loosened a landslide that covered not only the one and a half miles of plains, but also their tent. Digging out the tent and provisions, they again took to their boats. On the second night they were terrified by strange noises that issued from the earth, and their tent was blown to shreds by the strange winds that seemed to blow from every point of the compass, and as clouds were pouring down torrents of water, they fled to their boats. Forcing their boats for twelve miles through fields of fresh-forming ice and thirteen miles of rough sea, they at length reached Yakutat in safety.

Rumors are afloat that a portion of Cape St. Elias and Khatka island have disappeared in the sea. Without doubt, when scientific exploration of the Mount St. Elias region is made, there will be found many physical changes."
