AMUSEMENTS.

"Over the Sea" at the Park Theater.
"Over the Sea," a new melodrama from the pen of Harry Parker, was presented at the Park Theater for the first time yesterday afternoon and repeated last night. The audience at both performances being quite large. The play is distinctly English in tone, but varies from most pieces of its class in that the sentiment is not grossly exaggerated nor is one's credulity too seriously taxed. Straining after effect is noticeable in only one character—Susan Merton—and that is more the fault of the actress, Miss Eleanor Franklin, than of the playwright. Miss Franklin has, for some inexplicable reason, trained herself to speak her lines in a most unhearing and provoking style. Some really capable people are to be found among the other members of the cast. Miss Lizzie H. Chester as Sarah Merton, a fussy, nervous, elderly woman, does some very good character acting. H. M. Holden interprets the role of Francis Edeh, the prison chaplain, almost to perfection. In the eyes of the audience who fairly overwhelm him with commendation. John Meadows as interpreted by George E. Edwards is a good type of villain and receives a liberal supply of the kind of applause meted out to such characters. Marie Trace who plays the little boy tramp Joseph, has a difficult role, but handles it well. Edwin R. Whalen makes an exceedingly grotesque and comical part of Peter Crawley and his cant phrase "Oh, where are we all going to?" never fails to raise a laugh. J. B. Murray and R. H. Doolittle as Evans and Fry, jokers in the early portion of the play, are acceptable, but when they play the little boy tramp and Buster, Australian bushrangers, seem out of their element.

"Over the Sea" is well staged, thanks to the abundantly stocked scenery of the Park Theater. The "up-to-date vaudeville sketches" divided down to a set of stereoscopic pictures, but these were more than the average carried on the road. To test the political complexion of the crowd, portraits of Bryan and McKinley were thrown upon the screen, the latter receiving a veritable hurricane of applause and cheers. The Holden company will remain here to-day and to-morrow, presenting "Over the Sea" at both matinee and night performances. Thursday afternoon.

Notes of the Stage.

Edmund Rostand is said to be receiving royalties on "Cyrano de Bergerac" and "L'Aiglon" which average $500 a night.

"The Sporting Duchess" is to be revived on an elaborate scale by the Hopkins stock company, Chicago, the week of Aug. 19.

Herbert Stone & Co., the Chicago publishers, announce that Harold Frederic's "Damnation of Theron Ware" is to be dramatized.

Edna May is positively announced as under contract with Charles Frohman, who will star her in a new opera by Hugh Morton and Gustave Kerker.

C. Leslie Allen, the veteran actor, will play Don Antonio Perez in support of his daughter, Viola Allen, in her new Crawford play, "In the Palace of the King."

Wallace Munro and Percy Sage are making active preparations for their big revival of "The Prisoner of Zenda," the rights of which they secured from Daniel Frohman some months ago.

A friend of playwright Charles H. Hoyt, in an interview in the New Orleans Times-Democrat, declares unequivocally that the trouble with Mr. Hoyt is paresis, caused by rapid living, but that the death of his beautiful wife, Caroline, had little or nothing to do with the final breakdown.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be produced once more at the Park Theater, beginning Thursday afternoon and continuing the remainder of the week, with daily matinees. The production is the direction of Al W. Martin, who claims he has spent no money or pains to give it a handsome setting.

After being closed several months English Opera House will be illuminated from top to bottom to-morrow night in honor of the opening of a new season. The attraction is one of the best known in the country—Al G. Field's Greater Minstrels, an organization of great size and undoubted strength.

"Plat and Ovid's Daughter," a play by French Sheldon and Acton Bond, has been denied right of production by Mr. Redford, the English dramatic censor, on the ground that it deals with Scriptural passages. This leads one to speculate concerning the fate of "Herod the Great," Stephen Phillips's new play, written for Beerholm Tree.

Early next month the New York Casino will reopen with a new musical comedy by Harry B. Smith and Ludwig Engländer. The piece is as yet unnamed, but the idea is said to have been borrowed from Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors." Sam and Dick Bernad, who are somewhat alike in voice, features and actions, will play the two identical twins. A newcomer will have a leading part. A newcomer will be Marie Dainton, an English mimic, who is on her way to America under contract with Manager George W. Lederer.

"Self and Lady," a version by an American author of a new French farce by M. Pierre Decourcelles, author of "Two Little Vagabonds," will reopen Charles Frohman's London Vaudeville Theater. M. Decourcelles's play has not as yet been produced, and this will be the first time on record of a French play first seeing the light in London and in translated form. An exceptionally brilliant cast will be provided, including such famous English stage people as Edith Terry, Seymour Hicks, Fanny Brough, Herbert Standish, J. C. Buckstone, Agnes Miller, Jessie Moore and Cairns James.

FIGURES DISCLAIMED.

Census Bureau Has Given Out No Indianapolis Statistics.

Word comes from Washington that the figures of the population of Indianapolis, printed in a local newspaper last Saturday afternoon, are disclaimed by the Census Bureau. Acting Director Wines said yesterday they were not given out in Washington. Whoever gave them out, whether there or in this city, has laid himself open to a fine of $500 if the offense can be proven against him. It was intimated at the Census Bureau that an investigation of the leak would be made, and that a Superintendent's office would be included in the forthcoming census returns of Indianapolis. The census returns of Indianapolis are locked up in a burglar-proof safe in Washington. If the person who gave out figures purporting to be the population of Indianapolis is discovered it will go hard with him, and the bureau will do all it can to find him, it is announced.

Regarding the proposed investigation Mr. Clifford said last night he had no knowledge of it. He was not treated as a confederate, saying the investigation would result in nothing but proving that the figures were not given out. He said the report was not correct and that the reporter whom he supposed to be the author of the article had written on the subject of the census returns to the public that the figures were those of the local census office. He said the report of the intention of finding out if possible the figures of the census for Indianapolis was asked at that time were as to where the figures of the previous census, taken together with the census for Indianapolis, could be had. He was referred to the city library by Mr. Clifford, who said he declined to give him the figures of his office.

One of the most significant remarks made by Mr. Clifford last night was: "Do you know when I got to the office yesterday morning the first man I saw was a reporter for the paper that published the figures, who asked anxiously, 'How near were you right?'"

Mr. Clifford declared positively that the figures were not correct and intimated the difference between those given and the official figures would amount to several thousand. He also said he did not know just what the figures of the census were, but that he knew approximately, having been obliged in making payment of the vouchers for the names, though no accurate record was kept and he thought the figures he had in mind would be less than those which were announced from Washington.

The published figures, Mr. Clifford thought, would be found to be only an estimate, made up from examination of the school and federal statistics of other years. He said his chief clerk was the only one besides himself in the office who had access to the figures from which the total population could be had and he had no thought that the chief clerk had violated his confidence and the rules of the department.

WILL BUY NEW GROUNDS

THE HOLINESS ASSOCIATION FAILED TO LEASE ACTON PARK.

A New Camp Meeting Assembly Will Be Established Near Greenfield—Camp Notes.

Yesterday morning a meeting of the officers of the Indiana Holiness Association and the Acton Park Association took place for the purpose of arriving at some definite agreement in regard to the renting of the grounds for next year. The meeting was held from half past 1 until 4 o'clock and without any satisfactory results. The Holiness Association wished to lease the grounds for the next year, and during the ten days of the meetings to charge no admission fee to the grounds. The Acton Park Association would not agree to the five-year lease and would only lease it for a year at a time at $250 a year, with the understanding that the usual 10-cent gate fee would be charged. As the Holiness Association would not agree to this they have decided to buy ground near Greenfield, where they will hold their yearly meetings.

Rev. B. F. Morgan, superintendent of the grounds, is trying to enforce the rule that cottagers shall leave the grounds by 10 o'clock. This is very distasteful to many of the cottagers who wish to remain until the opening of the school year.

A BIG DEAL ON

But the Van Camp Hardware Company Is Not a Party.

An Associated Press dispatch from St. Louis says the Merchants' Wire and Nail Company changed owners yesterday, placing into possession of the Van Camp Hardware and Iron Company, of Indianapolis, and the Binkley Hardware Company, of Pittsburg, Pa. D. C. Bergundthaler, who took charge of the office of the Merchants' Wire and Nail Company, said each applicant would be given a hearing before the board. The franchise will not be rushed through, he said, but will be made with the Indianapolis Clean Street Company for operating water pipes in the city. Mr. Bergundthaler said he would give applicants for the hot-water heating franchise time and opportunity to explain their systems and the conditions under which they expect to operate in the city.

BLUE STILL PRESIDENT

ELIGIBILITY AGAIN DISCUSSED BY CENTRAL LABOR UNION.

A Charter from the Federation of Labor Expected—Other Business Considered.

Just before the adjournment of the Central Labor Union last night H. S. Beissenherz, of the musicians' union, brought up the question of the right of John Blue to act as president of the Central Labor organization, owing to the fact that he is a member of the American Agents' Association, the national body of which has been declared not to be a bona fide labor organization by the American Federation of Labor.

A communication received by the Central Labor Union from President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, was to the effect that no central labor union should be organized from among the American Agents' associations that were still affiliated with the national organization of that body. The question caused a lively discussion in which Edgar A. Perkins, Beissenherz and many others indulged. President Blue left his chair and made a statement that the matter was brought up through personal reasons and asked that a motion be made to unseat the delegation from the American Agents' Association in order that the matter might be settled. He declared that if it came to a fight he believed he could muster enough votes to have the charter sent back to the American Federation of Labor if that organization did not care to recognize the agents' association. He said the Indianapolis agents' union was affiliated with the national organization. This statement caused other arguments, but through all there was not a motion to unseat the delegates or president pending the arrival of the charter from the American Federation of Labor, or was there a motion to have the charter referred to the delegates' meeting. The motion to the effect that the delegates representing the American Agents' Association should be asked to resign, but this was also lost. The outcome of the argument was a motion that the credentials committee be asked to investigate the matter and report with credentials at future meetings from bona fide organizations.

FOR THE "MAGIC CIRCLE."

A Unique Arrangement for Monument Place—The Floats.

The interior arrangement of the "Magic Circle" during carnival week will be truly unique. The inclosure will be complete, save for the four arched entrances. At night the electric illuminations will reflect the water falls of the soldiers' monument, and the statues and other figures which ornament the base of the monument will be handsomely decorated. American colors will be used profusely. There will be hundreds of flags, yards of bunting and other decorations. Added to the arc lights row about the monument will be thousands of incandescent lights. The arched entrances will be illuminated so that the normal entrance to Tompkins, who will sell down White river from Broad Ripple, will be a triumphal one. His escort will be the mayor of the city and other officers. A tribe of Indians will be represented by the Red Men, whose make-up and "Indian whoops" will be the warning cry preceding the coming of the old Indian leader.

The silver float will be a collection of subjects of the most interest. They will be built at great expense. Isaac Godlove, their designer, will make up an "Indian" and in the "den" at West Washington street and the Belt Railroad these creations will be kept in the city until the night of the grand pageant. Yesterday a building permit was issued for the float, which will be a painting of the float painter's art is one distinctly different from the theater scene designer and artist. The float painter succeeded in making a success of float work.

The merchants' parade will be an attractive feature. Every big merchant in the city will be solicited to encourage this street parade, which will be a surprise of Indianapolis merchants, both wholesale and retail.

Applications for positions in the night pageant are being filled with Major General James R. Carnahan, the commander, by many cities and other organizations in Indianapolis and elsewhere.

Mrs. H. McCall Travis's contract with the fair "Festivities Social" calls for six weeks' work, and she will personally supervise the decorating.

Several hundred dollars to the $15,000 guarantee fund were obtained yesterday. Frederick J. Scholz, chairman of the Finance Committee, reported on the completion of the entire amount in order that every committee may estimate the cost of work outlined and let contracts without delay.

Rates for the Carnival.

The local passenger officials of the roads centering here, every one of the fifteen lines being represented, met yesterday to take action on rates for the coming carnival to this city, and it was decided to recommend to the general passenger agents of the several lines that a rate of one fare for the trip out and return, plus 25 cents for the return trip, be approved. It is believed that this recommendation will be approved. It is believed that the rates will be placed on sale Oct. 9, 10, 11 and 12, good to return including the return trip, to the extent of the Pennsylvania lines, was selected as chairman of the meeting. Some other minor matters of no great interest to the outside public were acted upon.

WORK FOR WORKS BOARD

A NEW WATER CONTRACT WILL BE TAKEN UP SHORTLY.

After that the Hot-Water Heating Franchise Will Be Considered—Municipal Affairs.

Chairman Sahn, of the Board of Public Works, said yesterday that the interurban franchise question, which has been occupying the attention of the board for many weeks, will be settled to-day, when two of the companies will no doubt accept the franchise as amended.

The next thing to deal with will be the new contract to be made with the Indianapolis Water Company. Chairman Sahn said the matter will be brought up as soon as the interurban companies are disposed of, and that will be this week. Some time ago the board sent a communication to the water company regarding a revision of the rates to be made for the city water. This communication was returned, as the company would not accept it. The board will arrange the provisions of the new contract, including the rates to be charged the city and private consumers. From statistics of water rates charged throughout the country it has been shown that the rate in Indianapolis is lower than the average, including all classes of water rates. In some cases, however, the rate is in excess of other cities, and it is likely the board will recommend in the new contract a lower rate in the classes where the Indianapolis company charges an excess rate.

After the water contract is disposed of the board will then do business with the petitioners for a franchise to operate a hot-water heating system in the city. There are three applicants for such a franchise and Chairman Sahn said each applicant would be given a hearing before the board. The franchise will not be rushed through, he said, but will be made with the Indianapolis Clean Street Company for operating water pipes in the city. Mr. Sahn said he would give applicants for the hot-water heating franchise time and opportunity to explain their systems and the conditions under which they expect to operate in the city.
