A bill extending the mining laws to saline lands, was passed. It declares all unoccuits to be subject to location and purchase under the mining laws.

The Senate then proceeded to consideration of the army reorganization bill. Mr. Proctor, of Vermont, for the military committee, offered as an amendment to Section 23, the provision introduced by himself yesterday, concerning vacancies in the position of chief of staff. The amendment was

When the section of the bill was reached providing for the appointment of volunteer officers to be officers in the regular army, an extended discussion ensued. Mr. Money declared that there were many officers in the volunteer army, who were as clearly entitled, as gentlemen and officers, to commission in the regular army as the cadets, who, by hazing and by their testimony by investigating committees "are to day disgracing the whole country at West

The committee amendment providing tha volunteer officers might be appointed to second lieutenancies was disagreed to, thus restoring the House provision that volurteer officers might be appointed to the grade of first lieutenant. Commenting upon this part of the bill Mr. Daniel declared that he wholly disagreed with the committee which had drawn the bill. As to the proposition for the appointment of volum teer officers to the regular army, Mr. Danie said: "It looks like a skillful piece of engineering by a regular army officer to keep out of the army many of the brightest and best military spirits of the country. Mr. Hawley offered from the committee on military affairs an amendment providing that the President of the United States shall have authority to fix the component parts of the army ration. Mr. Platt, of Connecticut, asked for unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of a bill to ratify and confirm an agreement with the Muscogee or Creek

They got on the cage, to be lowered, as usual, to the bottom of the mine. The engineer accidentally reversed his machinery, sending the cage crashing to the tor of the rigging. When the cage struck the heavy timbers above the rope gave way, and as the safety apparatus failed to work the cage fell to the bottom of the mine, a distance of 160 feet, instantly killing and badly mangling Jones and Hays. Lyda-Cox Case Goes to Jury.

MONTICELLO, Ind., Jan. 5.-The Lyda murder case was given to the jury at 2 p. m., at the close of the third week of the trial. Few cases have been tried here in which public judgment was so nearly unanimous as to the outcome. Though there has been no prejudice here for or against the defendants, who are entire strangers to the community, the impression has steadily grown among spectators that the state was making an uphill fight. All the evidence has been circumstantial and much of it very shadowy. Proof has been lacking even that Lyda's death was caused by strychnine poisoning, and the circumstances pointing to the guilt of the accused parties are only such as might ordinarily happen in a country neighborhood without even exciting gossip. A. B. Anderson, of Crawfordsville, closed the argument for the state at noon to-day. It was an able effort and apparently had weight with the lury. No verdict had been returned up to o'clock to-night.
