-Canal Boats and Steamships.-An interesting case in admiralty was rendered recently by Judge Coxe, in the United States Court, in the case of Dunbar vs. New York Steamship Company, in which it was sought to recover damages for the sinking of the plaintiff's canal boat, caused by swells from the steamboat company's vessel. The decision was in favor of the owner of the canal boat. The court held that the rules which the courts have repeatedly laid down for the guidance of arge steamers in crowded harbors are hardly applicable to river navigation.
