EXPRESSMEN SWAMPED

GIFT SEASON OF MANY PERSONS WILL BE EXTENDED.

They Will Receive Christmas Packages Several Days Late-Warehouses Crammed with Goods.

The agents of the express companies are unanimous in saying that the volume of Christmas business this year is beyond all precedent. In all of the warehouses packages are piled high on trucks and stacked almost to the ceiling near the walls and in the middle of the floors. All of the companies put on a large force of extra men, but they were deluged by the express matter coming in on every train and collected

Christmas eve a train was held at the the city Union Station for an hour to receive 800 rackages piled on the Adams Company's trucks, but the task was too heavy and the train pulled out without the packages. Yesterday morning there was so much ex-Adams warehouse that three trucks loaded with packages could not be pushed to the front. To get out the trucks were run to the rear of the building, carried on the elevator to the second floor, run across taken to the trains. The company has about forty extra men employed, and yet it is fully three days behind with deliver- edge of members of the army.

There extra men have worked night and day, but for one package removed two would appear, until the main room now looks like a storage house. It is estimated | your Christmas dinner. by this company that all of the Christmas deliveries will not be made before Saturday. The oldest packages are being taken out first. The American Express Company is not so deeply covered up as the others. The company had a large force of men on early and has managed to keep the volume of business down until it is very little behind time. The railway traffic is estimated by Superintendent Zion, of the Union Railway Company, to exceed that of any previous Christmas. Tuesday every train that came into the station carried extra coaches and ail were crowded. Yesterday several thousand people came to the city, and all day it was a busy scene in the Union Station.

CHILDREN AT MAENNERCHOR.

Annual Party Given for Them by Ladles' Society.

"I want an angel!" and "Oh-o-o-o!" came from the throats of two hundred children yesterday afternoon when they beheld the tableau which closed the Christmas entertainment in Maennerchor Hall, It showed five angels with flapping wings announcing Christmas. Little Amy Elliott stood in the rose on the scene, heralded the coming of Christmas through a long reed horn. Above her head was a brilliantly lighted Christmas tree resplendent with tinsel. Gretchen Geiger, as one of the angels, walked to the center of the stage and announced that the entertainment was closed and the children should get ready for the reception of the Elsa Dudin, Elsa Mannfeld and Freda Happersberger also took parts in the

The entertainment was the annual affair given by 'he Ladies' Society of the Maennerchor. All the members of the society took their children to the hall for the afternoon. At 3 o'clock the programme of music and recitations began. The Children's Symphony gave the opening number, "On the Meadows." Lucien Segar, a small boy, proved entertaining with his cornet solo, "The First Effort." Gretchen Geiger recited a German poem, "Christmas in the Ellis Levy followed with a violin solo that appealed to the older part of the audience. Ida Rogers sang and Carl Adam gave several numbers on the plane. At the close of the tableau the parents brought the little ones to the front of the stage, where boxes of candy, fruits and toys were handed the children. It seemed that whistles predominated, for in a short while the hall was alive with their screechings. While the children were receiving their presents the parents cleared the floor of the chairs. An orchestra made its appearance on the stage and preparations were made for the children's dance. The dance was to have begun at 5 o'clock, but, owing to the ength of the entertainment, it was 6 o'clock fore all the children had been supplied with gifts. During the next two hours following the little ones romped and skipped over the floor.

Professional Thieves Arrested.

Detectives Dugan, McGuff, Haley and Splann yesterday arrested John Webber and Tom Noble, who were charged with highway robbery and being known thieves. Webber lives at 430 South West street and was identified by Fred Wachstetter, as the man who held a revolver before his face early Monday morning while another man searched his pockets and took $85 in money and a gold watch. Wachstetter was also positive that Noble, who gave his name as Charles Brown, was one of the men. He lives at 500 East Washington street. Both men have prison records and Webber is now on parole from Michigan City Prison. Their pictures are in the rouges' callery. It is thought by the detectives they are the men who attempted to blow open the safe of J. M. Kaminsky & Co., at Kentucky avenue and Merrill streets. several nights ago.

DINNERS FOR CITY'S POOR

PROVIDED BY VARIOUS CHARITA-BLE ORGANIZATIONS.

Army Gave Away 130 Baskets of Food, and Mr. Grout's Office 250.

Taken all in all Christmas passed pleasantly for the city's poor yesterday. Through the combined efforts of the various charitable organizations, the church congregations and individuals with uncontracted hearts almost every family in Indianapolis suffering from absolute want was provided with a comfortable dinner and some little remembrance of the season. The Charity Organization Society, the Salvation Army, the Friendly Inn and the Home for Friendless Women had, it is stated, the "biggest" Christmas they ever experienced. The happiness in many a humble home yesterday was brought about by the unselfish labors of officers of the different organizations.

Secretary Grout, of the Charity Organization, told the Journal yesterday afternoon that 250 baskets of provisions had been given out Tuesday afternoon and yesterday morning. These baskets contained

The Third Christian Church was unable to supply all the calls made upon it and the Charity Organization Society dispensed about fifteen baskets for the church's poor. Besides providing material gifts, Secretary Grout was busily engaged in organizing forms of entertainment in several of the homes for the poor around the city. bread and butter and potatoes. At 2 o'clock the children were introduced to the Christmas tree and about 200 presents were given the little people. The old custom of providing a public dinner in the barracks has been done away with, it is believed, for good, for the reason that it is said many deserving people are crowded out by parasites who sieze the opportunity of getting a little free food. At the Home for Friendless Women a big Christmas dinner was held at which twenty or more of the inmates were served. A number of individual gifts were dispensed and things were made generally pleasant. The Friendly Inn, as usual, took an active part in Christmas generosity and the entertainment it provided its guests harmonized with the spirit of the day. The nobles of the Mystic Shrine dispensed 150 baskets of food to poor families. It will of course never be known how many good things were quietly given to poor people by generously disposed citizens who were averse to having their names used publicly; but by one whose duties takes him constantly into those parts of

A LITTLE LEARNING.

Is It More Dangerous Than a Great Deal of Learning?

San Francisco Post. Andrew Carnegie's proposal to make the United States government a junior partner in the steel trust by transferring to the secretary of the treasury bonds of the United States Steel Corporation to the amount of $10,000,000 for the purpose of a national university has been modified.

Mr. Carnegie ate lunch with the President yesterday, and the scheme was discussed in the light of popular objection to governmental partnership interests with a concern whose rapacity may by legislative regulation. It is said that Mr. Carnegie on mature reflection while tea was being poured acknowledged that his proposal was not exactly in accord with the spirit of American institutions or with the traditional independence of the American people as formulated in the famous Declaration. Finally, it is reported, he agreed that his donation should be in cash or "unobjectionable securities." It is also stated that Mr. Carnegie pledged himself, on condition that the American people promised to behave themselves, to increase his gift $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 or even $25,-

In the meantime the Carnegie proposal is being discussed by experts all over the world, and the consensus of this opinion is adverse to the practical utility of what the altruists and enthusiasts call "the higher education" applied in the affairs of everyday life, where "horse sense" is of more value than a knowledge of Greek or the ability to demonstrate a theorum in conic

"Too much learning," says Dr. Von Stradonitz, rector of the University of Berlin, if not a danger, is at least unprofitable. There shallow draughts intoxicate the And drinking largely sobers us again." German doctor, however, speaks experience; the philosopher of Twickenham reasoned priori according to the rule of Dr. Kant, who discarded the teachings of experience if it disapproved the deductions of metaphysical logic. Dr. Von Stradonitz says that they are suffering from this overplus of learning in Germany, where they are burdened with an unproductive class who look with inherited scorn on those whose education has been merely in the art of bread-winning. The doctor commends Carnegie's original technical school endowment, but confesses himself unable to commend the millionaire's national university proposal. When doctors disagree who shall decide?
