NEWS OF THE THEATERS

"THE LIBERTY BELLES," A NEW MUSICAL COMEDY, AT ENGLISH'S.

Harry B. Smith, in Writing It, Has Come Out of His Rut, and the Acting is Refreshingly Bright.

At the Theaters To-Day. ENGLISH'S—"The Liberty Belles," 2:15 and 8:15 p. m. GRAND—Vaudeville, 2:15 and 8:15 p. m. PARK—"The Great White Diamond," 2 and 8 p. m. EMPIRE—"The Cracker Jacks," 2 and 8 p. m.

"The Liberty Belles" at English's. "The Liberty Belles," acted at English's last night, is unique. It may be Harry B. Smith's emancipation proclamation. For years he has been writing librettos for Reginald de Koven and other composers to set to music, and though they have served their purposes properly they have not been shining examples of the playwright's art. He seems to have made a new resolution when he set about to write "The Liberty Belles," or, at least, the first act of it. The stage is a dormitory of a girls' seminary. It is night and the girls are in their beds. Girls from other rooms of the dormitory slip in with baskets of sandwiches and pies, the lights are turned up and a feast begins.

The girls are in all stages of dress except final undress. Some of them are in night-gowns, others have on their petticoats and one wears pink pajamas. The personalities are as varied as the costumes and all are pretty and bright. Pauline Chase is a girl in the pajamas and she uses her bed as a spring-board. Edna Hunter clings to one of Paul Bourget's novels. She habitually reads Bourget in preference to sleeping—"he so understands a woman's heart."

Augusta Glose is a student of music and she sits at a piano and sings three little songs, "Glossy," "Ella," and "The Song of the Lark." Edna Hunter, who is a pianist and mixes sharp mimicry with tragic lines. Sandoz Milliken is desperately in love. Edith Barr stutters and Louise Middleton sings. Marie Murphy is a Janes girl and Helene Lucas, a Cuban girl sent to America to be educated. The Cuban smokes a cigarette rather than a cigar, or, in the pajamas, and she uses her bed as a spring-board. Edna Hunter clings to one of Paul Bourget's novels. She habitually reads Bourget in preference to sleeping—"he so understands a woman's heart."

spontaneously funny. Lottie Faust plays an Italian singer, and Minnie McEvoy a deaf secretary principal interestingly. Nellie and Lizzie McCoy have a pleasing duet.

The English style of musical comedy comedy is followed in that the songs are contributed by several writers, and no one man is given credit for a full score. The songs are by Miss Lachaux, and she directs the orchestra. Mr. Lachaux is a well-known pianist and conductor and was here last season with Mark Hambourg, the pianist, and Petchnikoff, the Russian violinist, of the Amphico Club's concerts. Other songs are by Indianapolis's own Harry von Tilzer, A. B. Sloane, Louis Gotschall, Clifford Crawford, and Alfred Aarons.

Miss Glose's songs in the first act, which she accompanies on the piano, are "A Lesson with a Fan," "A Billet Doux" and "To Marry a Millionaire." Miss Butler sings "A Little Child Like Me" and "Jack of Lantern." At the beginning of the second act the Misses Hunter and Marguerite Walker sing "The Girl's Song," "Shopping Chorus," Mr. Marlowe has a rousing song, "A Yankee Tar," by Gottschall, and "Starlight," by Lachaux, which is a number of the girls her verses; "Follow the Man that Leads the Band," composed by Lachaux, and "My Filipino Pet," sung by Mr. Slavin and the company. Von Tilzer's song "Lovely Dream," and Mr. Gilfoyl sings it.

The young women of the company are so full of vim and vigor that they are "show girls" of other entertainments and they dress with such simplicity and good taste that the stage lights are without glare and gaudiness. The scenery is beautiful. The men's voices, particularly in the first act, are of a high standard of attention, but otherwise the music is neatly sung. In almost every point "The Liberty Belles" advances as an American musical comedy. Performances will be given this afternoon and to-night.

premises. The situation next day is very exciting, however, as the two guests are kept out of each other's sight with great difficulty, and the guests are kept waiting and by the use of various ruses and walks through so smoothly until afternoon, when, to get to bed and take a nap. This unwelcome plan for his comfort he circumvents by means of a chair. Instead, where, of course, he meets KITTY, and like the old-fashioned stories, "all ends well." Why Japanese Women Look Pleasant.

Pearson's Weekly. Perhaps the secret of the sweet expression and habitual serenity of the Japanese women can be found in their freedom from small worries. The fashion of dress never varying saves the wear of mind on that subject, and the business of the house and simplicity of diet make housekeeping a mere bagatelle. Everything is exquisitely clean and easily kept so. There is no paint, no drapery, no crowd of little ornaments, no coming into the houses with the feet covered with mud, no dust, no the feeling of living in rooms that can be turned into balconies and verandas at a moment's notice. The Japanese women stay as freely as do the scenes on the stage and let in all out-of-doors, or change of air, dressing over the eye should be very light.

Viruses of Honey.

Washington Star. In the prevalence of spring colds, cold sores and chapped lips the viruses of honey should not be overlooked. In all catarrhal disorders it will be found most effective, while used as an ointment it is both purifying and healing. A teaspoonful of honey boiled in one cupful of water makes a reliable gargle for a sore throat or a healing lotion for inflamed eyes. Dip a little linen cloth in the liquid and lay over the eyes. In dressing over the eye should be very light.

Wicked Mr. Wu.

New York Times. Mrs. John Logan and Wu Tingfang, at a late social gathering in Washington, were discussing the "eternal feminine" question. "Alas," sighed Mrs. Logan, "how true is the old saying that a woman's work is never done?" "That's just the way it is," responded the Chinese minister with a smile that was childlike and bland. "I suppose that is because her natural disposition is to shrink from doing it."

PAINTERS' TROUBLES.

Strike Will End Shortly, as Many Contractors Have Signed Scale. The painters' strike is fast drawing to a close. Committees representing the Master Painters' Association and the union held a joint meeting yesterday afternoon, but failed to reach an agreement. A settlement with the association is not now looked for and the union seems likely to deal individually with each firm. Many of the master painters were not satisfied with the association failed to act promptly, and yesterday Joseph R. Adams started the ball rolling by signing the proposed scale. The painters' demand for 35 cents an hour, an advance of 6 cents an hour, and immediate recognition of the union by the association was the first of the larger firms to sign the scale, and before night about sixteen firms had done so. The scale will be in effect, however, have not settled and are holding back. There now remain fewer than 100 men on strike.
