

City's Social Life

THE GAYETIES AND ACTIVITIES OF THE WEEK

The Popular Girl.

New York Tribune.

Again and again girls try to discover the secret of popularity, for to be generally liked is one of the great desiderata of youthful social ambition. Why such-and-such a one should constantly be singled out for delightful house parties, and another, who is apparently equally attractive, left out; why at a dance one girl is a belle and another a wallflower—why, in short, one should be taken and another left—is one of the problems that seem to defy solution. Perhaps one of the best ways to discover the why and the wherefore of such qualifications is to study the characteristics of some exponent of social popularity. Take Miss Z., for instance. Regarding her casually, it is hard to find adequate reasons for her being such a general favorite. She is not more than moderately pretty; she is not particularly clever; her people are not rich. There seems to be nothing to warrant her success, and yet whenever any party is organized she is one of the first thought of, and she could spend the entire year in a round of visits if she wished to. If one analyzed her personality one would find that she has the gift of a perfectly equable temperament. She is always in good spirits, and is never so far as one can see depressed or dull. Her sense of fun, she is never boisterous or loud. One cannot broach any subject with her without ending her reply with a laugh. She is visiting her guests genuinely interested in everything—in her hostess's house, children and various preoccupations her host's particular hobby, whatever it is—his horses, farm or yacht—and displays intelligent interest in the things she pronounces her "bully," because they feel her enthusiasm for their sports and animals is sincere—"no girl's shamming about it." Another quality that accounts for her popularity is that she is always ready to go in for everything. Whatever she proposes she always seems perfectly delighted to do. Her perceptions, too, are very keen, otherwise she could not be so popular. She is always well versed in the latest and newest fad. These are some of her surface qualities that give her popularity. She probably has other "little ways" that are not so easily detected, but almost every one has some "popularity" factors which can be studied as an object lesson and draw her own deductions from.

A Girl's Sentiment.

Washington Post.

The sentimental side of romance is a thing I have long since ceased trying to understand. The task requires a birdseye view, which one of the sex cannot hope to acquire. There is, for example, pretty Miss Blank, who, as everybody one knew, was engaged, even to the ring stage, to Lieutenant Somebody, who went to Manila and from there to the far country, from which no one returns. His going was all so long ago that most of us have forgotten the engagement. His sweetheart, however, still remembers. I met her in Dupont Circle on an afternoon not long ago, and as she stopped to chat with a friend who was going by my way my eyes dwelt enviously on the new blue foulard gown she was wearing. It had the usual ruffles and fringes, but about the shoulders lay a yoke of exquisitely embroidered pins cloth. The third one of us remarked the charming yoke and asked where it came from. Miss Blank's dimpled face took on as serious a look as the face of a young woman with a charming gown on a spring afternoon can wear.

"It's something poor, dear Hal sent me when he first went out, said she. 'You know he sent me such a lot of Filipino things, and I wouldn't part with one of them for worlds.' This was a handkerchief, and when my dressmaker was making this frock we racked our brains to think of some trimming that wouldn't be so fearfully common. I thought of this and the dressmaker cut out the center and fitted it, and doesn't it make a really chic yoke? No one would guess what it is. Ever so many people have complimented me on this gown, but I don't tell everybody what the yoke is made of. I think it was a clever idea of mine, don't you? And then, you know, somehow I feel that poor Hal would like to have me wear a dress that thinks it such a success."

And when I saw her next she was walking beside somebody dear. Hal never knew, and a bunch of violets was pinned at the edge of the yoke. She was dimpling at the somebody, too, but the country at the end of the trail which leads only one way I dare say Hal doesn't care, or perhaps he understands a woman's idea of sentiment there, where all things are made clear.

Drawback to Ping-Pong.

Philadelphia Record.

"There is no doubt that a knowledge of tennis enables one to put up a good game of ping-pong," said a member of the Germantown Cricket Club yesterday, "but, on the other hand, it is equally certain that ping-pong has a bad effect on one's game of tennis. I played quite a lot of the parlor game during the winter, and now when I try the outdoor game I find it is almost impossible for me to get back my stroke. Other tennis players complain of the same thing, otherwise I might think I was simply falling off in my game. At the beginning of other seasons, after a few days of practice, I have had no difficulty in getting into my old form, but this year it is the hardest kind of work, and I blame it on ping-pong."

So Lovely.

Philadelphia Times.

Invitations to ping-pong parties are fashionably engraved on a folded sheet of heavy white paper, with two bats or rackets crossed at the top and two balls between.

JUMPED ABOUT

Until He Found the Right Food.

What a hades some people go through because their food does not supply the right kind of nourishment to the body. Take the following for example: A gentleman in Baltimore says: "About two years ago I began to experience a peculiar depression occasionally, with pains in the back part of my head and down along the spine. Gradually my eyesight began to fall and my memory grew poor. A general nervousness set in. I used all the will power I could command to help myself, but was forced to give up a good position and seek the advice of the family doctor. He said nervousness, and sent me to a great nerve specialist. So for four months I was massaged and dosed with medicine, but all to no benefit. Then I went to New York and consulted Dr. —. He sent me to another great specialist, and he in turn sent me to — Sanitarium, where I stayed for a long time. "It was the oldest old man I was dosed with medicine and massaged and bathed. Finally I left there and went to another specialist, who told me I would live only a few months. This rather frightened me, and I placed myself under Dr. —. He said stomachic, and I was given a course of a goodly portion of phosphate of potash, a nerve and brain food, and that the food being used of it easily, at any rate I got well, and both the doctor and myself knew that Grape-Nuts made it possible. "I sincerely believe that are practically all of our nervous troubles are caused by imperfect nourishment. It was fortunate for me that I could get such a food as Grape-Nuts. You can use this letter, but don't publish my name, please. Name withheld by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich."

WASSON'S

WHITE WEAR FOR SUMMER

MUSLIN Underwear

WE satisfied our severest critics with the big sale of UNDERMUSLINS last week. Also ourselves. The two leading reasons that made this sale such a success are, first, our qualities are of the sort that women want; second, our prices are lower than ever before. For the second week we have prepared more liberally than the first. The fame of unusual values has spread and the enlarged section devoted to UNDERMUSLINS will be crowded every business day. And, best of all, this sale interests everyone, from the buyer of the lowest priced corset cover to the finest example of French Lingerie—all must be convinced of the price lowness.
