FT. WAYNE WANTS THE PRESIDENT TO DEDICATE COURTHOUSE.,

James M. Barrett, former state senator from Allen county and the author of the Barrett improvement law, was at the Hotel English yesterday. With Lieutenant Governor Gilbert, Mr. Barrett called on Senators Fairbanks and Beveridge in reference to the dedication of Fort Wayne's handsome new courthouse. The Wayne people, irrespective of political party, have an idea they would like to have the President of the United States help dedicate their building. It was with a view to extending an invitation to President Roosevelt that the call on the senators was made yesterday. It is the plan to have the President stop at Fort Wayne next September while on his Western trip. He will go through Indiana and the Fort Wayne people are willing to arrange their exercises to suit the convenience of the President. It will first be ascertained whether or not he will be willing to stop at Fort Wayne. It is felt that if the itinerary is not so made up that it cannot be changed he will consent to take part in the Fort Wayne dedication. The event will smack of politics in no way, Mr. Barrett says. The building has been erected by the people, and although the county is Democratic, the Republicans will have an equal share in the dedicatory exercises. "I think there is no finer courthouse anywhere in the country," said Mr. Barrett yesterday The building will cost Allen county about $500,000 completed. It is practically complete now and is being occupied. Two aditional court rooms have been put in the building, one of which will be devoted to relics and documents that are associated with the earlier history of Fort Wayne.

Before Capital Was Invested in the Enterprise the Opinion of Experts Was Secured.

The Columbia Voting Machine Company, of Indianapolis, received information yesterday that its device had successfully passed the examination of the Indiana commission for examining voting machines. Mr. A. R. Thompson, a mechanical engineer, secretary of the commission, which is composed of Hugh Dougherty, of Bluffton; Frank L. Powell, of Madison, and Mr. Thompson, officially announced that at a meeting of the commission, held on July 7 for the purpose of examining the Columbia machine, after an exhaustive study and examination of the device the commission found that it passed on all points. Mr. Thompson says the board found that the device fulfilled the complete requirements of the law applying to the examination of such machines, as well as conforming to the stringent rules and requirements of the

A SIGNAL SUCCESS The Columbia machine, among its many points, has gained signal success in being able to meet the requirement of voting the entire fifty-four candidates that may at the presidential election be presented in Marion county. No other machine passed by any board in this country could meet this requirement. This large, perfected machine is the one that passed the board, but the machine is so constructed as to make it adaptable to smaller, and, indeed, any kind of conditions at elections. Among the numerous machines that have been projected in this State and elsewhere this machine especially interested some men of this city who employed mechanical engineers for the purpose of determining its worth, prior to investing enough to complete the original costly structure. Upon the report of these engineers the machine was constructed and proved successful.

The inventor of the machine is C. Christiansen, who has spent the last seven years in the study and making of a practical, simple voting machine. During this period Mr. Christiansen has invented several successful machines suited to limited uses, but has held to his purpose to complete a machine that would not only meet the severest requirements but contain many additional features, which his long bodied in this device. The directors of the company held meeting yesterday and decided to manufacture the device in this city. A liberal amount of capital will be invested in a factory, enabling the company to get out large orders promptly and to employ representatives to present the device through-A mechanical engineer said yesterday that the machine was so simply constructed that it would withstand any sort of unskilled handling and rough usage without damage and that the wearing parts of the machine would last a lifetime. The machine is so constructed as to make Sible for a voter to either defraud or make a mistake, and contains many features which go farther than the requirements of the board and will do much towards solving conditions which have heretofore been unforeseen. The company says that it has estimates upon the cost of manufacture which will enable them to put the machine upon the market at a much less cost than any machine thus far passed. The machine completely protects the voter in an absolutely secret ballot. For the past several months Arthur M. He says that his study of the act as applied to voting machines allows him to state to the company that this device is
