Frankwood E. Williams the Valedictorian for the Unusually Large Class of Graduates.

WILLIAM LOWE BRYAN'S TALK

PRESIDENT OF INDIANA UNIVERSITY ON "THE SIMPLE LIFE."

The Graduating Class Numbers One Hundred and Forty-Six Young Men and Women.

There was an impressive scene last evening at English's Opera House when, in a most solemn and sincere manner, Frankwood E. Williams delivered the valedictory address to the graduating class of 1933 of the Shortridge High School.

The valedictory was filled with happy recollections of former school days and mention of "hops," senior fairs, contests, the Daily Echo and all the features of Shortridge life.

The speaker said that all these characteristics of life had given and now the thoughts of the students turned to his great hope. He thanked the faculty for its help during the four years' course and paid a high tribute to the members of the school board.

A BIG AUDIENCE. The theater was filled with friends of the class and the students presented a pretty picture on the stage.

Shortridge Orchestra, Fringed with the "naughty three." This was one of the most pleasant features of the evening and made the exercises more religious than are most affairs of the kind.

He said in a charming delivery and his talk was greatly enjoyed. He said in a charming delivery and his talk was greatly enjoyed.

It is possible for you who are a child of civilization to live a life which is as noble and as grand as that of a Hottentot.
