The lodge has been wired to take some action in the matter. Ten dollars, some other loose change and several letters were in his pocket. Another of the bodies is believed to be that of an Indianapolis man, as he wore an insurance badge of the Columbia Relief Association of that city. The word "Irish" was found written inside his hat band. On the third body no papers were found nor anything that could serve as a means of identification. On the corpse of the supposed Indianapolis man was found $2. He was "beachy" but tried to stand up. When found after the wreck, and in conversation with the brakeman tried to tell the story of his death. The brakeman says he murmured something about "Brookville," and it is possible that he lived in Brookville, Ind., and was on his way to work. A broken journal carried the derangement of six cars, and the tramps were on the cars. One of the tramps was badly mutilated. All of the men were between the ages of twenty-five and thirty years. The bodies were found on the tracks of the Monon Railway at Ash Grove, ten miles north of this city, early this morning. The accident happened while the train was running at full speed.
