The alarm of the vesterday evening about the time folks were going home to tea, was a false one. The engines raced over the city and people rah in different directions, but ne burning building was discovered. The air was heavy and the smoke from different mills and factories hung in clouds over them and some one of them probably gave rise to the alarm.

with respect to the situation of the forces of Bragg and Buell is of course contraband. It is sale, however, to say that the military authorities expect to rid Kentucky speedily of rebel forces. Gen. Morgan, from Cumberland Gap, is well able to take care of himself, and is picking up rebel goods and trains with as much facility as his namesake "John" of the Confederate army ever did the like. A few days ago a fellow brought into his camp a large drove of mules he had gathered up in the central counties and was driving to the army South, thinking he had entered the lines of his rebel friends. As early as April, 1861, Memphis had com menced the alteration of immense quantities of by her eloquence drew quite a crowd about the flint lock muskets, sent South during Floyd's City Bullding. She was marched off to the lock term as Secretary of War. I saw this work progressing, even before secession was a completed fact there. New Orleans turned out the best ri fles I ever saw in the South. They were similar to the French Minie rifle, furnished with fine sword bayonets. The Louisiana troops were mostly armed with these. At Nashville and Gallatin, Tennessee, rifles were also made, and I suppose in every considerable city in the South. In addition, it should be known that thousands of Government arms were in the hands of the people, all through the Southern States, how they procured them I do not know. These were gathered up and altered or improved, and issued to the troops. Many of the regiments went into the held armed with every description of guns, from the small-bore squarel rifle and double-barreled shot gun to the ponderous Queen Bess musket and clumsy but effective German Yager. The regiments were furnished as fast as possible with arms of one kind, and the others returned to the factories to be classified and issued again. Sword bayonets were fitted to double barreled shot guns, making them a very effective weapon. Others were cut down to a uniform length of about twenty four inches, and issued to the cavairy. Common hunting rifles were bored out to carry a Minie ball, twenty to the pound, and sword bayonets fitted to them. One entire brig-

Colonel Link served his country with distinguished gallantry during the Mexican war, and his courage and military skill at that time won for him distinction and promotion. When the toesin of civil war first sounded-when the conntry first called upon her sons to raise up and defend her from traitor hands,-Colonel Link, true to the patriotic impulses that had before led him to the field of battle, promptly responded, and raised one of the first companies recruited in the State. He was appointed Colonel of the 12th regiment, and in that position he commanded the love and respect of his men, and under his discipline the regiment became the model regiment in the service. Reorganized, it held its own against thrice its numbers on the bloody fields of Richmond, until at last forced to give way before the overwhelming forces opposed to it, Colonel Link, while striving to rally its shattered columns, received his wound, which unhappily proved mortal. Idolized by the entire regiment, highly esteemed at home, and having by his many genial and charitable qualities in social life, accumulated hosts of friends here, his loss is universally lamented, and has cast a gloom over the entire city .- Fort Wayne Sentinel.
