The Cavaller's Serenade.

BY COL. WM. S. HAWKINS, OF TENNESSEE, (PRISONER OF WARL) O, come to the heart that is beating for theel By the hope of my freedom, my bride thou shall be. Come. dear one, come bright eyes, let's gallop away, Far, far to the southward, on dawn of the day; A proud steed awaits thee-my band's in the vale-O haste thee, love, haste, 'ere the night watches fail. Along my bold legion together we'll ride, And my gallants will honor the cavalier's bride:

O, fear not that flash where the rivulet gleams, All still and unconscious the enemy dreams: That clang!-but a warrior trying his blade-Their heart's are of iron, O, he not afraid, That light—but the sheen on a bright-barreled gun; That murmur—they talk of the deeds we have done! Our chargers are matchless, and, bounding along, Thy beauty shall gladden the chief of the throng.

The moon's pailed beams shineth brightly afar, And fandly doth twinkle our love's happy star: Then come, dearest, come to my sun brightened clime, Where even the waters run rippling in ryhme; Where the breezes are laden with the odor of flowers, And beauty and gladness lend wings to the hours: When sleeping, my sentries shall watch o'er the lawn, And my silvery bugle shall wake thee at dawn.

Where the oak throws its shade o'er the wild muscadine, Where the mock-bird is singing, thy love shall be mine. On thee, in the greenwood, the sun shall not glare As thy white hand is wreathing thy soft silken hair; Thy bright eyes shall glance their encouragement sweet 30.1w Asmy braves sally forth on their coursers so fleet, And returning, with captures and spoils, to thy side, Thy kiss shall reward me, my darling, my bride!

> The lovers of Southland are tender and true, The scout of the woodland bends only to thee; A ladder of silk from the window is thrown, One leap, and thy soldier shall hold thee-his own. Sound the raily, my lads, then away like the deer, And guard well the bride of your bold cavaller.

CAMP OF THE 35TH REG. IND. VOLS.

Near Marletta, Ga., June 29, '64 § We, the undersigned, commissioned officers of the 35th regiment of Indiana veteran volunteers, learn with sincere regret that Capt Edward G. Breene, of Co. K , of our regiment, has been charged with cowardice. Having been intimately acquainted with him since the organization of the voice is one of the purest, clearest and sweetest regiment, we have ever felt a pride and an honor in associating with him as a brother officer, knowing him to be a brave and patriotic soldier, which has been tested upon many a hard fought battlefield; and we are proud to say, in justice to the Crptain, that we have ever found him at his post of duty at all times and under all circumstances, and we do, therefore, pronounce the above charge of cowardice utterly and totally false; and furthermore, we have no besitancy in saying that Capt. Breene has been unjustly dealt with.
