Capt. Bland Ballard.

In a Louisville paper we find the following interesting sketch of the life of this pioneer, who died recently in that city:

Capt. Bland Ballard was born near Fredericksburg, Va., on the 19th of October, 1761, and at the time of his death was in his 87th year. He came to Kentucky in 1779, and joined the regular militia which was kept up for the defense of the country; and after serving on Bowman's campaign in 1779, accompanied the expedition led by Gen. Clark against the Chick-saw Indians in Ohio in 1781, in which occasion he received a severe wound in the hip, from the effects of which he suffered to his death. At the time of the wound he was near bleeding to death before he could procure surgical aid.

In 1782 he was taken to the West, where he stayed with Gen. Clark, who had been ordered to destroy the Pickaway towns. In 1786 he was a spy for Gen. Clark in the expedition to the Wabash, rendered abortive by the mutiny of the soldiers. In the summer of 1791, he was in a guide under Gen. Scott and Wilkinson, and was present under Gen. Wayne at the decisive battle on the 20th of August, 1794.

When not engaged in regular campaigns, he acted as a hunter and spy for Gen. Clark, who was stationed at Louisville, and in this service he continued for two years and a half. During this time he had several encounters with the Indians. One of these occurred just below Louisville. He had been sent on a party of spy to the falls, and from thence up to what is now the town of Westport. On his way down the river, near six or eight miles below the falls, he was early one morning, a notice was given him by the Indians, that they had discovered a canoe held by three Indians, approaching the Kentucky shore. When they had approached within range of his rifle, he discovered a canoe held by three Indians,
