THE HALLADAY WIND-MILL.—Many of the most scientific, able and experienced Mechanics and Engineers in the United States have examined this Machine, and pronounce it one of the most beautiful and useful inventions of modern days.

By a simple, yet ingenious device, as the gale increases in severity, the sails gradually present a greater and less resistance to the wind, but when the pressure is reduced to a certain degree the sails are brought to the wind with the greatest force; at the height, little is presented to its power, and the machine is safe from the gale or storm. It is also perfectly governed under their utmost position. Something of this kind for Railroad stations, and Steam and Cotton Plantations, where a man is to remain in constant, both for pumping water and grinding corn, of unquestioned superiority. Each Mill is warranted to pump and will raise twice gallons of water, and grind five bushels of corn per hour. For further information or orders, address
