FOUR WHITE NORTHERN "FREEDOM."

The Plainfield (N. Y.) Gazette, alluding to the death in New York recently of Mr. R. L. Blanchard, a printer, says:

We knew him personally, having worked in the same office with him many a day. About three years ago he published a paper in the city of New Brunswick, called the Middlesex Independent. He then worked on the New Brunswick Fredonian, but work failing there, he went to New York in search of employment. He left a wife and three interesting children behind him in New Brunswick. About every two or three months she would journey to New Brunswick to see her family. A short time ago his prolonged absence from his home alarmed his wife to such an extent that she went to New York for the purpose of searching him; and, after a long days search they succeeded in finding him in a garret in that city, where he had been secreted and concealed for, not being able to pay board. It is supposed he had literally starved to death for the want of the common necessaries of life. When found, he was so near dead that he lived but a day longer. This occurred in a city that annually spends from eight to ten millions to support it. This, we would say, is the field for our Missionary Societies to labor in.

There is a principle involved in the foregoing pitiable narrative which alone induces us to publish it; and that principle, in its practice, as above related, demonstrates with melancholy minuteness the horrible condition which the Northern system of free labor imposes upon the white poor and destitute. It is by no means an isolated case. It does not, we are sorry to say, form a legitimate exception to the general rule which ought to prevail everywhere all over the surface of the globe, and which alone prevails throughout the negro slave-holding States of the South. Hardly an exchange is received by us from large Northern cities, during winter seasons, which does not contain stories of terrible want and awful destitution, frequently resulting in death.

With us of the South such scenes, trials, distresses and deaths, are unknown. In the South, under our beneficent system of labor, every free white man and woman, willing to work, can earn an honorable, comfortable, and amply independent livelihood. Among the honest and industrious there is never any want, unless brought on by misfortune or disease, and that is always promptly and liberally relieved. No people among us, not even the idle, the dissolute, or the abandoned, are ever allowed to starve for want of food or lack of that attention which humanity demands should be bestowed upon all. Even the lowest and the worst are always provided for; and so far as the poor slaves are concerned they are the best cared for and happiest class of laboring population the sun shines upon in his daily course through the heavens. None of them ever die from starvation, or from the want of any physical requirement. Ban-ned fanatics may maintain that this is the fruit of self-interest. Admit the proposition, for the sake of argument—what then? Is it not better, to all practical intents and purposes, to be a well fed, well lodged Southern slave, constantly provided for in every necessary particular, and moderately worked, than to be a freeman, permitted to starve to death in a New York garret with neither home, nor friend, nor listener by? We hold that the advantages, christianly considered, are mostly on the side of the Southern system of labor, and maintain that the promulgations of hair-splitting bigots who persistently throw aside indisputable practicalities in the pursuit of unnatural theories impossible of realization, are unworthy the slightest, honest, candid and intelligent consideration.

When any system of labor produces such fruits it is high time the basis upon which it rests should be examined into with a view to amelioration and reform; and the sooner the Northern people look into it, examine it, and reform it, the better for them. A majority of Northern property-holders, in many localities, inculcate the idea among the laboring masses that it is not only right and praiseworthy, but an absolute duty, to break whatever laws that protect Southerners, and to steal from them a particular description of property whenever occasion presents itself. Suppose these laboring, poverty-stricken masses, which compose an overwhelming majority of their people, stimulated by the lessons taught them, and maddened by present want and approaching starvation, should conclude, some bleak winter morning, in New York, that what was good to practice on strangers was good to practice at home, and commence relieving their necessities by the strong hand of force? Where would Fifth Avenue be? What would become of the residences and riches of canting, well-fed and clothed Abolitionists? Answer that! The hungry and cold, and despairing, should they enter upon a career of indiscriminate appropriation, would be only doing at home what their betters had taught them to do abroad. It would be only changing the scene of plunder. That is all. There is no other difference.

ST. CHARLES THEATER.—Whatever the cause, the St. Charles was yesterday evening crowded to excess, there being scarcely even standing room. Perhaps the announcement that the hero of Lundy's Lane would honor the performance with his presence had something to do with it; but we imagine that the attractions of Miss Avonia's personation of "Sybil," and the fact that it was her benefit night had more. The tragedy went off killingly.

To the Public.

In consequence of the confusion of numbers on some of the streets in this city, and particularly on Canal street, I am informed that persons are very much troubled to find my place of business, and, in some instances, have not succeeded at all; also that some persons, having the same number as myself, are very much annoyed by the frequent calls for me. This is a serious damage to the business man in many instances, and a great inconvenience to the public, and we hope will soon be corrected by the proper authorities. The City Surveyor informs me that our number is right, viz: 140 Canal street; and yet I find FOUR OTHER PLACES with the same number, and at one of them a dentist's and physician's office.

To direct the public more definitely, I will add that my rooms are

Singer's
SEWING MACHINES
Twelve months since reliable certificates were published of the
UNIVERSAL SUCCESS
—OF—
SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES,
Five years in Lafourche and Terrebonne parishes, and also in New Orleans, and no other certificates of the success of Sewing Machines in Louisiana have been published. Of over $90 that have been sold in this region during the last twelve months, the undersigned is not aware that one is out of repair, and most of them were warranted for three years.

A still greater evidence of their superiority is the fact that their sale to the clothing factories in New York, and in the Eastern States, is rapidly increasing. It is now almost universally acknowledged by those engaged in the manufacture of clothing, that SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES surpass all others in durability and strength, also in the excellence and beauty of their stitch, which is more uniformly the same on both sides of the fabric than that made by any other Machine.

In order to counteract the influence of the universal success of Singer's Sewing Machines, great efforts were made in 1857, and also recently, by the agents of the Wheeler & Wilson Machines, to mislead and deceive this community by publishing statements that "they have obtained all the premiums wherever their Machines have been exhibited in competition with Singer's and all others."

In the fall of 1857 the first premium was awarded to the Singer Machine by the Connecticut State Agricultural Society, where the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine is made.

The first premium was also awarded to Singer's Sewing Machine at the Fair in St. Louis in September, 1857, a correct account of which is given below. Such extraordinary exertions and sacrifices were never made before by the Wheeler & Wilson agents to obtain a premium in the United States.

At the late Fair in Memphis, Tenn., the first premium was awarded to Singer's Machine, and a premium of $100 in cash was given to Mrs. F. M. Cash, for the finest specimen of sewing—a muslin dress—made on Singer's Machine.

The following FIRST PREMIUMS (Gold and Silver Medals) are on exhibition at the office of the undersigned, 32 Camp st.:

The First Premium of the "Exhibition Universelle" in Paris, of all the principal Sewing Machines in Europe and America.

The First Premium (Gold Medal) of the American Institute in New York; also two other premiums from the American Institute.

The First Premium of the Franklin Mechanics' Institute in Pennsylvania.

The First Premium of the Mechanics' Institute in Cincinnati.

The First Premium of the Maryland Institute for the Promotion of the Mechanical Arts.

The First Premium of the Connecticut State Agricultural Society.

Mention is not made of these Medals as any evidence of the superiority of Singer's Sewing Machines, but to prevent the public being humbugged by the statements of the agents of the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

As the persons who are appointed committees to decide concerning the relative merits of Sewing Machines, in most instances know nothing of the practical working of the machines, no reliance can be placed on their judgment, and no satisfactory information can be obtained concerning Sewing Machines except from those who have used them. For this reason, I. M. SINGER & CO., having established the reputation of their Sewing Machines above all others throughout the civilized world, have not recently contended for the premium at any Fair nor have they authorized their agents to do so, but in a few instances the agents have exhibited the machines and have generally been successful. At several Fairs at which the agents of Wheeler & Wilson boast of taking the premium, the Singer Machine was not represented.

We learn from reliable authority that the Wheeler & Wilson agent obtained the premium at the late Fair in St. Louis in the following manner:

By means known only to himself or his friends, a Silver Pitcher was purchased, worth seventy-five dollars. An arrangement was made by the agents of different Sewing Machines that each should be equally represented in the Committee, or that there should be no owners of Sewing Machines on the Committee. By some species of intrigue, the W. & W. agent succeeded in getting a committee appointed composed almost entirely of owners of the Wheeler & Wilson Machine. In less than two hours after the Fair opened, and before there had been any examination of the different kinds of Sewing Machines, or even a meeting of the Committee, three ladies, owners of the W. & W. Machine, a tied the "Blue Ribbon" to that Machine, thus, as is currently reported, giving their Agent his own Silver Pitcher.

The Agent has never dared to boast in the St. Louis papers of taking this premium, but the circumstances above related should appear against him.

Another system of humbugging extensively practiced, is to publish the opinion of newspaper editors, who, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, know nothing of the merits or demerits of Sewing Machines. It has been proved, in most instances, that the gift of a Sewing Machine has been followed by a decided preference of the kind of Sewing Machine received. So extensively has this gift operation been practiced in the Northern and Eastern States, that steps have been taken to ascertain whether or not there is an editor of a religious journal there who has not received or had the offer of a Wheeler & Wilson, or a Grover & Baker Sewing Machine as a gift. If there is one who has been overlooked in this grand gift scheme, it is hoped that he will make a public avowal of the fact.

The futility of these efforts to deceive the public is shown by the rapid increase in the sale of the Singer Machine.

The undersigned has found it necessary to rent the whole building, at 33 Camp street, and has fitted it up in beautiful style, and takes pleasure in exhibiting his Sewing Machines to all, whether they wish to purchase or not.

Of the forty kinds of inferior Sewing Machines, a few have been tried in this community, and of these the public need no caution, but in order to introduce others it has been deemed necessary to enlarge the letters on the sign and
