

AMUSEMENTS.
THEATRE OPERA HOUSE
Dramatic Varieties—JOHN STAFF
Twenty-third week of the Star Company.
Dances of Mr. Philip Warren, Treasurer of the Theatre.
FURDAY EVENING, May 10, 1859.
To commence with the comedy of THE WIVES and THE
...
THEATRE OPERA HOUSE
Dramatic Varieties—JOHN STAFF
Twenty-third week of the Star Company.
Dances of Mr. Philip Warren, Treasurer of the Theatre.
FURDAY EVENING, May 10, 1859.
To commence with the comedy of THE WIVES and THE
...
THEATRE OPERA HOUSE
Dramatic Varieties—JOHN STAFF
Twenty-third week of the Star Company.
Dances of Mr. Philip Warren, Treasurer of the Theatre.
FURDAY EVENING, May 10, 1859.
To commence with the comedy of THE WIVES and THE
...

NEW ORLEANS DAILY CRESCENT.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY, SUNDAY EXCEPTED, BY NIXON & ADAMS, AT NO. 70 CAMP STREET.
TUESDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1859.
NUMBER 54.

NEW ORLEANS DAILY CRESCENT.

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

MEXICAN CORRESPONDENCE.

Diplomatic Matters—Extraordinary Conduct of the British Minister—Mr. Otway Getting Himself in a Humble Position—A Letter Written—The Countess—Mr. McLane Steps Upon the Stage—Has a Part in Contrivance with Miramonte's Secretary of State—Talks About the Responsibility of a Sign—Thence Goes to the Governor.
MINATLÁN, May 3, 1859.
Eda. Crescent: It is impossible to finish up the news from Mexico, in a correspondence, however regular and industrious the writer may be. A deep political game is being played on this theater, and the plot is growing too thick to be comprehended or explained. The actors do not change, but their characters seem to undergo modification, and at present I am mixed up in a part of the play, to which I cannot but be two-sided, and both of these are disagreeable to accept. The conduct of Mr. Otway, the British Minister, in his diplomatic course since the expulsion of Comandante, has adhered to one plank, and that was opposition to the Liberals. He was one of the Ministerial trio—Foyth, Gabrio and Otway—that stepped forward to depose Juarez, and the legitimate President, and acknowledge Zuloaga; and since that time, his whole power and influence have been used, both directly and indirectly, to crush out the Liberal party. It was through his influence that the revenues of Vera Cruz were diverted from the National Treasury to pay English claims, and it will be through his influence that any further action will be taken, if it is done, to harass Juarez and the Liberals in the same place.

TELEGRAPHED TO THE NEW ORLEANS CRESCENT.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.
ARRIVAL OF STEAMSHIP ANGLIO-SAXON.
SARDINIA ANSWERS THE ULTIMATUM.
AUSTRIA EXTENDS THE TIME.
Panic on the London Exchange.
VICTOR EMANUEL COMMANDS HIS ARMY.
THE RUSSIAN MILITARY MOVEMENTS.
RUSSO-FRENCH ALLIANCE STABLES ENGLAND.
The Departure of Napoleon for the Army.
THE ARRIVAL OF FRENCH TROOPS IN ITALY.
VICTOR EMANUEL MADE DICTATOR.
THE POWER PROTEST AGAINST AUSTRIA.
The Sailing of the French Channel Fleet.
THE FRENCH MINISTER ORDERED FROM VIENNA.
Breadstuffs and Provisions Advanced.
BY THE SOUTHERN LINE.
QUEBEC, May 9.—The steamship Anglo-Saxon, Capt. Bonard, of the Liverpool and Canadian line, arrived at this port this morning.
She left Liverpool on Wednesday the 27th ultimo, and brings four days later advice than was received by the Anglo-Baxton.
Commercial Intelligence.
LONDON, April 27.—The sales of Cotton for two days, Monday and Tuesday, were limited to 9000 bales.
The market closed on Saturday, on account of the Easter holidays.
There is a partial decline in Cotton, &c. since the closing of the market. The decline is chiefly confined to the middling and lower grades.
The market closed with a declining tendency. The quotations are irregular and unreliable.
LIVERPOOL, April 27.—The English funds are greatly depressed, owing to the alarming accounts from the Continent, and the apparently near approach of hostilities.
The announcement of a heavy French loan also had a depressing effect, and the funds fell rapidly.
A decline of 2 1/2 per cent. is reported. Consols for money closed at 91 1/2.
LIVERPOOL, April 27.—The Liverpool Breadstuffs market generally closed with an advancing tendency. There is an increased activity in the market, and a large speculative demand, owing to the almost certain prospect of war. Holders demand an advance, and are unwilling to sell, unless at a profit.
The Liverpool Provision market also closed with an advancing tendency and increased activity.
There is some speculative inquiry, and holders demand an advance, which has been obtained on some articles.
General and Political Intelligence.
LONDON, April 27.—The crisis in Continental affairs still continues, no actual declaration of war having yet been made.
The latest telegraphic advices from the Continent indicate that actual hostilities cannot long be delayed.
Austrian troops continue to pour into Lombardy.
The Austrian army on the Tisza, it is expected, may cross over into Piedmont at any moment.
Large bodies of French troops continue to march towards the Niagara. The French army, and the French troops on the frontier are entering the Sardinian territory, and being urged forward with the utmost dispatch.
It is reported that France has concluded an offensive and defensive treaty of alliance with Russia.
A loan of 500,000,000 francs has been announced by the French Government.
The French funds are greatly depressed in consequence, and a general panic on the Bourse was the result.
FURTHER BY STEAMSHIP ANGLIO-SAXON.
QUEBEC, May 9.—The Cunard steamship Kangaroo, the steamship Kangaroo and the Nova Scotia have arrived out.
LIVERPOOL, April 27.—Of the 9000 bales of Cotton sold on Monday and Tuesday 1900 were taken by speculators and exporters. Some authorities say that prices are easier, but quotations are unchanged; others report a general decline of 1/2.
The market closed with a declining tendency. The best authorities quote Middling Orleans at 7 1/2, Middling Uplands 6 1/2.
The advices from Manchester and other manufacturing districts are less favorable.
There was little inquiry for goods, and prices closed easier, though not materially lower.
LIVERPOOL, Wednesday Afternoon, April 27.—The Cotton market closed by the general belief that war is at hand, continues very dull, and still has a declining tendency.
Prices are irregular and the market is unsettled. A further slight decline is reported.
The Breadstuffs market generally has decidedly an advancing tendency.
Richardson, Spence & Co. report that Wheat closed with an advancing tendency, and holders demand an advance of 1/4 per cent.
They report Flour closed buoyant at 63 to 93 advance.
Wheat has advanced 40 to 42 per cent.
Corn closed buoyant at 23 to 33 advance.
LONDON, Wednesday P. M., April 27.—Under the influence of the report that Austria had extended the time for the final answer of Sardinia to her ultimatum, the funds rallied a little, and closed at 92, but the announcement of the French and Russian alliance caused a panic on the London Exchange, and the funds again fell.
Wheat has advanced from one to two shillings. Rice closed firm.
The London Money Market is active and more stringent. It is expected that the Bank of England will advance the rate of discount.
LIVERPOOL, April 27.—Sardinian Cabinet has replied to Austria ultimatum, but the tenor of the reply has not yet transpired.
It is reported that Austria has extended the time for the final answer of Sardinia to ultimatum four ten days longer.
The Austrian army on the Ticino has assumed a very threatening position, and it is generally expected that they will cross the Ticino into Sardinia.
It is also reported that Austria had agreed to enter into a proposed mediation, but the report lacks confirmation.
The greatest activity prevails in all the military and naval departments throughout France.
The French Legislative body met on the 26th at Paris, to receive the Government statement relative to the present crisis in Europe, and to sanction the loan of 500,000,000 francs.
Count Walewski is making the official explanation before the body, but the name of the approaching war upon Austria, and defied the policy of France as being favorable to peace.
The French contingent for the year has been raised to 110,000 men instead of 80,000.
England, Russia and Prussia unite in protesting against the conduct of Austria in precipitating the war by her aggressive policy, and throwing the responsibility of the approaching conflict upon her.
The French Channel fleet had sailed from Cherbourg with sealed orders, but it was reported and generally believed that it was bound for the Adriatic.
It is rumored that the entire military force of England is to be embodied and placed on a war footing.
The Sardinian Chambers had invested King Victor Emmanuel with dictatorial power, suspending the constitution temporarily for that purpose.

THE FRENCH MINISTER ORDERED FROM VIENNA.

The Paris Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Drouin de Lhuys, has been ordered to leave Vienna for Paris. He had been in Vienna since the 15th of April, and had been engaged in the negotiation of a treaty of alliance between France and Russia. The treaty was signed on the 26th of April, and was a general and offensive and defensive alliance. The treaty was signed in the name of the Emperor Napoleon III. and the Emperor Alexander II. The treaty was signed in the city of Vienna, in the presence of the Emperor Napoleon III. and the Emperor Alexander II. The treaty was signed in the city of Vienna, in the presence of the Emperor Napoleon III. and the Emperor Alexander II.

THE ARRIVAL OF FRENCH TROOPS IN ITALY.

The French troops have arrived in Italy in large numbers. They have been ordered to march towards the frontiers of Piedmont, and are being urged forward with the utmost dispatch. The French army is now in a position to enter the Sardinian territory, and is being urged forward with the utmost dispatch. The French army is now in a position to enter the Sardinian territory, and is being urged forward with the utmost dispatch.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from Liverpool of the 27th. The political, the commercial, the financial accounts, all were considered as dark and foreboding; that is, foreboding that the condition of Europe was about at the culminating point, that hostilities were being taken about by the reported alliance between Russia and France, and is supposed the solution of this unexpected league will be solved before long. In the meantime, the talk is, what will England do? Quem vobis? We shall have further details by the Persis, which will be due at New York to-morrow; and as she never brought any cheering accounts, the talk is we shall have something really exciting on her arrival. Then the talk is what effect will we have on us. We have alluded to this before, and can only remark that American interests will not be compromised in the least. There will be some little excitement on the receipt of intelligence that hostilities have actually commenced, and when they get to fighting in earnest, we can look calmly on it, for however the war should be general; that is, should Great Britain, Prussia and Russia, all go into the matter, and the war should last for a long period of time, American interests, American trade, in fact, the great shipping and agricultural interests would be greatly benefited. King Cotton might be treated with some disrespect at first, its supreme usefulness discarded, but it would be for a very brief time. Cotton is not going to be so much disturbed by war as many folks suppose.

THE TALK ON 'ORANGE.'

It was quiet yesterday morning on the streets. About midnight the arrival of the steamer Anglo-Baxton at Quebec was announced, with dates from